Stimson, Ex-Secretary Of State, War Dies at 83

Heart Attack Fatal; Statesman Suffered Broken Leg in July; Was in 4 Cabinets

WEST HILLS, N. Y., Oct. 20 (U.P.).—Henry L. Stimson, 83, former Secretary of War and Secretary of State, died today of a heart attack at his country home here.

Members of his family said the elder statesman was stricken this afternoon and died at about 4 p. m.

Mr. Stimson had been confined to hospitals and his home since July 16 when he suffered a fracture of his left upper leg at his Long Island home here.

Mr. Stimson, a Republican, served in the cabinets of four administrations from President Taft to President Truman.

A statesman who placed duty above party line, Mr. Stimson was President William Howard Taft's Secretary of War, President Herbert Hoover's Secretary of State, and again Secretary of War, building and directing the greatest army the United States ever had, under Presidents Roosevelt and Truman.

He was appointed a United States Attorney by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1906, was Governor General of the Philippines under President Coolidge, and in one of his last great decisions advised President Truman in 1945 to drop the atom bomb on Japan to stop World War II.

During his 40 years of public service, Mr. Stimson was a formal, dignified official who shunned publicity and worked with quiet but vast efficiency.

He made one of his great decisions in 1931, asking for stern clamps on aggression after Japan's conquest of Manchuria. In the "Stimson Doctrine," which he enunciated then as Secretary of State, he declared the United States would not recognize territorial gains made through aggression.

He watched World War II build up through unchecked aggression and then, as Secretary of War in 1945, he made his recommendation to President Truman that the atom bomb be dropped on Japan.

"The bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki," he said two years later, "ended a war. They also made it wholly clear that we must never have another war."

Mr. Stimson stepped down as Secretary of War on September 21, 1945. His seventy-eighth birthday, and retired to his Long Island estate.

"The only deadly sin I know is cynicism," Stimson said in clos-

Divers Find Jet Debris In Potomac

2 Pilots' Bodies Are Still Missing After Triple Crash

Navy divers yesterday recovered six or eight pieces of F-86 jet fighter plane wreckage from the Potomac River but failed to locate bodies of two airmen missing since the crash of three jet planes Wednesday.

Diving from a YDB commanded by Lieut. J. H. McDonald, 48, assistant officer in charge of the Naval Deep Sea Diving School at the Naval Gun Factory, the Navy men worked from 3:30 p. m. until darkness forced them to stop for the night They operated about 10 miles south of Quantico, Va.

Diving operations will be resumed at dawn today, Lieut. McDonald said. "This isn't the first one for us," said Lieutenant McDonald. "We know the stuff will be scattered all over the place." He said he did not expect to recover the wreckage in large pieces or in one location.

The two divers who went down into the Potomac were part of a crew of 11 who were prepared to search for the plane wreckage. Boatswain's Mate 2/C Thomas E. Dinan, 24, of Bellmore, N. Y., who went down at 3:30 p. m., brought up most of the wreckage which the boat crew was able to identify.

Included was part of a machine gun barrel, a piece of tubing, three pieces of metal, part of a cockpit with an Indian head—part of the insignia of the squadron.

Dinan said the visibility was so poor "you could only see your hand in front of your face." He said navigation on the river bottom was difficult because of 2 feet of mud.

Dinan stopped diving at about 5 p. m., when he was replaced by Hospital Man Chief G. Al McCoy, 26, of Bristol, Va. McCoy stayed down only about 20 minutes. He said the currents were going bad and made searching difficult. He brought up one long strip of unidentified wreckage.

The two missing jets are believed to have crashed moments before a third F-86, piloted by Lieut. Luther C. Barcus, made a belly-landing on a farm near Nokesville. The planes were flying in tight formation in a fog

2d Precinct Again Leads In City Crime

Major Offenses Decline to 20,163 During Fiscal '50, Police Report Shows

Number Two Precinct, in the heart of the Nation's Capital, again leads the city as the scene of major crime.

In the first detailed statistical survey ever released publicly by the Metropolitan Police Department, one-eighth of the city's 20,163 crimes were said to have occurred in the area bounded by 15th, K and S sts. nw., and North Capitol st., during the 12 months ended June 30.

More murders, more rapes and attempted rapes, more robberies and attempted robberies, more burglaries and attempted housebreakings and more aggravated assaults occurred in Number Two than in any other precinct.

Only serious competition was offered by Number One Precinct, which led the city in grand and petty larceny and auto theft.

Hartman Prepares It

The 132-page report, released yesterday by Chief of Police Robert J. Barrett, is the work of Lieut. Earl Hartman, head of the Statistical Bureau. Last year's report was submitted last February to the House Subcommittee investigating Washington crime, but not made public.

Approximately 100 copies of the report were printed in the department, covering crimes committed during the 12 months ending June 30, 1950. The volume supplements the annual report Barrett gave the District Commissioners on September 8.

The number of major crimes, murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny and auto theft, decreased during fiscal 1950, the report showed, from 21,334 to 20,163.

But Washington still led the Nation in the number of aggravated assaults on the basis of population, and aggravated assaults increased in fiscal 1950 from 4165 to 4228.

Most crime-free precinct, the report showed, is Number Six, in the extreme northern section of the city, between Rock Creek Park and Riggs rd. ne., north of Buchanan st. nw.

Only 342 Crimes

Only 342 major crimes occurred in Number Six from July 1, 149 to June 30, 1950.

Only precincts free of murder for the 12-month period were Number Seven and Number Eight, the area west of Rock Crek Park.

In total major crimes committed, the precincts ranked Two, One, Nine, Thirteen, Three, Four, Ten, Five, Fouteen, Eleven, Twelve, Eight, Seven and Six.

The spotlight focused by the House Crime Subcommittee on the lack of gambling arrests in Number Three and Seven precincts produced different reactions.

Arrests for gambling offenses showed little increase in Number Seven, but jumped markedly in Number Three.

Only three persons were arrested for gambling felonies in Number Seven during fiscal 1950,

U. S. Seeks Way to Rush Food And Avert Fall of Tito's Regime

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Top Administration experts are feverishly attempting to find a way to get immediate food shipments to Yugoslavia.

They are convinced that unless a multi-million-dollar relief program is set under way at once, the consequence of the record Yugoslavian drought will be the revolutionary collapse of Marshall Tito's government. With it, there would be the loss of 32 army divisions, the strongest anti-Russian military force in Europe.

Although decisions have not yet been taken, current proposals call for an interim program of perhaps 30 million dollars to be begun now.

Yugoslavia yesterday made formal request for aid—105 million dollars' worth. Ambassador Vladimir Popovic asked for it in a note to Secretary of State Acheson, saying his country would "greatly appreciate" American assistance.

Yugoslavia has already received United States assurance something will be done, it would appear. For on Thursday, Yugoslav Foreign Minister Edward Kardelj indicated he had reached some agreement on this point in a talk with Acheson.

This was confirmed from Administration sources, saying, "We've got to do it." This is not because they have any love for Tito, or any illusions about his dyed-in-the-wool Communist regime. But they feel the drought has been such that a collapse is certain unless relief is supplied. And the only government that could follow Tito would be a Russian satellite regime. In that event, not only would Tito's military power be lost, but the

Reds Gather To Protest German 'Army'

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Oct. 20 (AP).—Vice Premier V. M. Molotov of Soviet Russia and Foreign Ministers of seven other Communist nations met here today with the announced purpose of discussing "the remilitarization of western Germany," which the Soviet government has warned it will not tolerate.

Molotov, long out of the Kremlin limelight, apparently is acting as Soviet Foreign Minister at the meeting. Andrei Y. Vishinsky, who succeeded Molotov as Foreign Minister March 5, 1949, is now attending the United Nations Assembly meeting in New York.

(There were repeated reports last August that Molotov was visiting Peiping, the capital of Communist China, for a conference on Asian affairs. A Japanese anti-Communist organization in Tokyo said—without confirmation—that Molotov was talking over with Chinese Red leaders an invasion of Formosa. Chinese Nationalists in Taipei, the Formosan capital,

West Backs Big 5 Talks; U.S. Skeptical

Soviet Insistence On Participation Of Chinese Reds May Snag Plan

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 20 (AP).—The United States, Britain and France provisionally agreed today to take part in five-power peace talks, but Russia's expected insistence on Chinese Communist participation could wreck the project.

U. S. Delegate John Foster Dulles and British Minister of State Kenneth Younger warned against false hopes of easy or early success even if the Big Five ultimately get together. They told the U. N. Assembly's Political Committee world tension stems from basic disagreements rather than from a lack of big-power meetings.

Little Hope of Success

[Secretary Acheson said in Washington that he saw no great hope of anything productive coming out of five-power talks until (1) the Western powers strengthened their armed forces and (2) the Russians changed their present attitudes.

[He told his press conference the United States was always ready to talk. As an example, he said the United States had tried at least once a month to talk with the Russians about an Austrian treaty, but without success.

[On the Austrian treaty the United States had gone seven-eighths of the way to meet Soviet wishes, the Secretary said, and still the Russians would not agree to sign it.]

The dispute on Chinese representation strikes directly at the prospect for a Big-Five conference. Russia repeatedly has sought to oust the Chinese Nationalists from the United Nations and give their seats to the Chinese Reds.

While Russia has not yet participated in the Political Committee's current debate, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky is expected to stick to his position on China when he makes his views known Saturday.

Consultations Sought

Syria and Iraq have presented a resolution calling for consultations by the United States, Britain, France, Russia and China "on all problems which are likely to threaten world peace."

A revision brought in this morning, not specifically naming either Chinese regime, said the permanent members of the Security Council should engage in the talks.

The latest draft calls on the big powers to meet "collectively or otherwise." China would have to take part in collective talks. Observers pointed out that the provision now is broad enough to allow two, three or four-power meetings without Chinese participation.

Before any complete big-power agreement is reached, however, the major nations still would have to come to an understanding on China, since that case is one of the key issues dividing them.

Far East 'Lift' Will Continue, Kuter's View

Further Deployment Of U. S. Forces Ahead, MATS Head Declares

HONOLULU, Oct. 20 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, Military Air Transport Service commander, today predicted "extensive and further deployment of United States troops and material" in the Far East after the Korean war.

General Kuter, en route home from a global tour of MATS bases, said:

"The Pacific airlift will continue indefinitely after the end of the shooting war in Korea."

He told reporters at Hickam Air Force Base "it is impossible to forecast when the airlift will end."

"At the end of the shooting in Korea there will be extensive and further deployment of troops and materiel" in the Far East.

"The airlift will be a continuing operation of indefinite duration."

(In Washington, a usually well-informed defense source expressed belief that Kuter was talking about taking troops and air units out of Korea after the victory and reshuffling some of them in Japan and other areas where the U. S. already maintains forces.

(He said it was possible that some troops might be sent from Korea to Germany, although this had not been decided. Speculating on other places where part of U. S. forces in Korea might be redeployed, he also mentioned Alaska.

(This source expressed conviction that Kuter was not talking about moving U. S. forces to Indo-China.)

The Pacific airlift began after the North Korean army stormed south across the thirty-eighth parallel June 25.

It has been built up until it exceeds in volume Berlin's famed "operation vittles" of 1948-49.

General Kuter said four-engined transports were ferrying troops and materiel across the Pacific at the rate of one plane every 75 minutes.

The airlift averaged 252,000 plane-miles a day in September, he said. The Berlin airlift's average daily haul was 10,000 plane-miles less than that or 242,000 per day.

Reds Cut Off; Search Is On For Captive Americans

3000 Chutists Land, Then Are Joined By South Koreans Fighting Northward

By Russell Brines

TOKYO (Saturday), Oct. 21 (AP).—Two battalions of United States parachute troopers jumped unopposed into Red Korea between the fallen capital of Pyongyang and the Manchurian border Friday under the personal direction of General MacArthur.

The United Nations commander said after the surprise operation:

"The war is very definitely coming to an end."

He did not elaborate.

The newly landed paratroopers were reinforced by leading elements of the South Korean Sixth Division. The South Koreans had fought up the center of the peninsula to the road linking Pyongyang to Wonsan, on the east coast. Then swung westward.

An Eighth Army spokesman said the Sixth Division's rapid move probably cut off many enemy troops and set the stage for a South Korean drive to the Manchurian border.

The 'chutists had two missions: To block escape of die-hard North Korean Reds still battling United Nations troops in and around secured Pyongyang, and to rescue American prisoners of war.

Three thousand parachute troops floated down from C-119s and 40 C-47s onto flat land near Sukchon and Sunchon, each roughly 30 miles north of Pyongyang and 80 miles southeast of the Manchurian border.

The towns are on the two main roads leading north from the captured Red stronghold of Pyongyang.

After watching the first airborne operation of this war from his Constellation plane Scap, MacArthur said:

"I didn't see any opposition. It looks like it was a complete surprise. It looks like we closed the trap. Closing that trap should be the end of all organized resistance. The war is very definitely coming to an end."

It had begun June 25 when the North Korean Reds invaded South Korea and almost succeeded in overrunning the whole peninsula before the American-led United Nations forces could concentrate the power for the present successful counteroffensive.

The parachute drop might be

First Illegal TV Station Located On Mountain Top

By The Associated Press

The Federal Communications Commission announced yesterday that it had located an illegal television station atop a mountain in Pennsylvania and closed it down.

In the parlance of the trade it was "a first in television." The FCC said nothing like it had ever come up before.

The station, according to FCC, was being operated by the tube division of Sylvania Electric Products, Inc., Emporium, Pa., one of the country's largest makers of television tubes. The explanation given by company officials for the unlicensed operation, the commission said, was that Sylvania knew it was of no use to apply for a broadcasting permit because of the two-year-old freeze on new TV grants. At Emporium tonight, Board Chairman M. F. Balcom of Sylvania had no comment.

FCC noted that operation of unlicensed video outlets involves a possible fine of $10,000.

Million Died in East

BONN, Oct. 20 (AP).—The West German Government has sent two officials to the United Nations with what it considers documentary evidence that a million German prisoners of war and civilians abducted from East Germany have died behind the Iron Curtain.

West German officials said tonight their representatives were being sent to U. N. headquarters in connection with a motion presented by Britain, the United States, and Australia calling on the U. N. to investigate the status of German and Japanese prisoners still missing and believed held in Russia.

Purse-Snatcher Gets $5000 in Jewelry by Ruse

Two diamond rings, which she had taken from her young daughters for safekeeping over the weekend, were stolen yesterday from Mrs. Tillie Brotman, 44, in her cleaning shop, LaParadise, at 3506 Connecticut ave. nw.

In addition to the rings, valued at $3000, the thief took a diamond and platinum bracelet valued at $2000. The thief, after sending Mrs. Brotman to the back of the shop to find a suit he said had been cleaned, grabbed her pocketbook containing the jewelry from under the counter and fled.

Government Unit Leads

Community Chest contributions of the Washington area yesterday reached 23.55 percent of the $4,260,000 quota.

A total of $1,003,441.47 has been collected since the campaign opened just over a week ago.

Four report luncheons of Government, Special Solicitation, and Business I and II units were held simultaneously in the Washington and Willard Hotels yesterday.

Rear Admiral Joseph Jelley, jr., chief of the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks, speaking to the Government group, credited "key men and women" in the drive for apparent success to date.

Government unit has met 36.8 percent of a $1,682,700 quota, with the Navy the first department to report over 100 percent. Eighteen of 20 Navy divisions have now passed their quotas.

As of yesterday, Army was close behind Navy's 107.8 percent and $115,322 collected with its 101.26 percent and $132,145 raised, according to spokesman Col. Everett L. Butler.

Other departments reported percentages follows: American National Red Cross, 105 percent; Selective Service Division, 100 percent; State Department, 82.7; Reconstruction Finance Corporation, 78; Treasury Department, 75.41; Library of Congress, 79.4; White House, 69.1 percent.

With $307,678.25 raised, Business-Employees Unit I has now reached 18.5 percent of its quota of $1,658,800.

H. L. Rust, jr. realtor and Community Chest campaign chairman of 1934, emphasized the need of Red Feather endowments for District hospitals.

Business Unit II estimated a 7.9 percent, or $19,292.80 Community Chest collections to date. Its quota is $243,200.

Special Solicitation Unit reported $40,452.46 collected, or 12.99 percent of a $311,500 quota.

Army Wins Right to Control Big New Combat Helicopters

The Army apparently has won a significant victory over the control of one important new segment of tactical aviation.

This was disclosed last night with the announcement that helicopter transport companies will be organized within the Army for behind-enemy-lines combat and supply missions. Army pilots rather than Air Force aviators will fly the 'copters.

While the announcement did not say what size or type of helicopters will be assigned to the new companies, The Washington Post learned that the Piasecki Helicopter Corp. of Morton, Pa., is getting a sizable production order to build its big, new, all-metal H-21 model. The craft will carry 15 fully equipped soldiers.

The question of which service should operate them has been a moot issue at the Pentagon. Regulations issued by the Joint Chiefs of Staff have limited the Army to operation of helicopters with less than 4000 pounds payload and to airplanes of the "grass-hopper" type. Anything bigger than that employed to support ground troops had to be maintained and operated by the Air Force.

The attitude of USAF chiefs has been that if the Army were allowed to operate larger aircraft, there would be duplication of effort. Not only would the Army have to maintain its own shops, service facilities, etc., but the Air Force also would have to maintain helicopters for rescue and other work. If the USAF only had the bigger helicopters, their machines could be employed on other duties when not needed for Army training.

That was just the trouble, Army officers argued. They pointed to the complaints of some Army airborne generals that paratrooper training suffered because Air Force troop carrier squadrons were given too many cargo-carrying jobs.

"Helicopter - equipped companies, it is anticipated," said the Army last night, "will facilitate river crossings and special types of operations which may be required for arctic, amphibious, mountain and jungle warfare where movement of vehicles on the ground can be extremely difficult."

The new Army companies are expected to borrow heavily from Marine Corps experience with troop-carrying helicopters. Tactics and techniques have been developed by Leatherneck units at Quantico, Va., during the past several years.

Each of the new Army companies will be equipped with 23 'copters, two for command and reconnaissance and the rest for carrying soldiers, weapons and supplies. The Army did not say how many of the companies are to be created, but since it stated that the units will be employed in corps, divisions and smaller organizations, it was presumed that ultimately several dozen might be established.

Max C. Schwartz Named Chief

D. C. Civil Defense Setup Calls for 70,000 Wardens

The broad framework of a civil-defense warden system for the District, involving perhaps 70,000 volunteer workers, was announced yesterday by Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young.

Schwartz

Concurrently, the District Commissioners officially named Max C. Schwartz, local businessman, as "chief warden" in the city's civil defense setup. Schwartz held the same position during World War II.

The city will be divided into six divisions which will generally follow the boundary lines of the police precincts.

Each division will be split into 12 "areas," for a total of 72. The "area" groupings will probably follow the territorial jurisdiction of the citizen's associations, Young said, but will not be under their control.

The "areas" will break down into a total of 420 "zones," and a final subdivision will net about 3570 "sectors." A sector in most cases will comprise one city block.

The city's dissection was worked out at a morning meeting in General Young's office. Participants included: Acting Civil Defense Director John E. Fondahl, Schwartz, Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Woolsey Hall, president of the Federation of Civic Associations.

In another development yesterday, Fondahl attacked the clause in the local civil defense law which requires an FBI investigation of every employe hired for the civil defense staff. He said it will doubtless delay the organizing phase of the program.

He said he will recommend that Congress delete the language.

NPA Cuts Rubber Use To Pre-Korea Levels

To Meet Growth

Truman Adds 39 Generals To U. S. Army

President Truman yesterday created 39 new generals to command the Nation's expanding Army.

He gave recess appointments as major generals to 10 brigadier generals and similar advancement to 39 colonels. All 10 of the new two-stars and 29 of the brigadiers represent an increase in the number of Army generals. The other 10 colonels promoted will fill vacancies left by the advancement of the brigadiers to be major generals.

One of the new one-star generals is Frank S. Bowen, jr., who as a colonel commanding the 187th Regimental Combat Team led the parachute drop on North Korea yesterday.

Many on Far East Duty

Three other colonels promoted are serving with Far East units: Rinaldo Van Brunt, chief of staff of the First Corps; Elwyn D. Post, on duty at Far East Headquarters, and Armistead D. Mead, jr., assistant commander of the Third Division.

Many of the new brigadiers are on duty in this area. They include Frank N. Roberts, assistant military aide to President Truman; Orlando C. Mood, chief of staff of the Second Army at Fort George G. Meade, and Albert C. Lieber, commander of the Engineer Training Center, Fort Belvoir.

The President also gave permanent appointments to three temporary major generals—Maj. Gen. Albert C. Smith, commander of the Second Armored Division; Maj. Gen. William F. Marquat, on duty in the Far East, and Maj. Gen. George A. Horkan, on duty in Germany.

These generals now holding temporary rank were named permanent brigadier generals:

Brig. Gen. George B. Barth, Far East Command.
Brig. Gen. Urban Niblo, Far East Command.
Brig. Gen. Wayne C. Zimmerman, Fort Monroe, Va.
Maj. Gen. Francis H. Lanahan, jr., Fort Monmouth, N. J.

All of the officers promoted in connection with the expansion of generals billets were given temporary appointments. The Army would not disclose how many generals the additional 39 will give them, saying the information was "classified."

After one false start—a rubber limitation order some weeks ago which failed to limit—the Government tried again yesterday.

The National Production Authority issued a regulation to hold tire and rubber companies to the monthly consumption levels during the year preceding the Korean outbreak.

That would be a cut-back from recent consumption rates of about 15 per cent.

Meantime, Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman warned last night that consumer credit curbs may have to be tightened again and that other controls might be necessary to stop inflation.

Wage, Price Curbs Seen

He made the prediction in an address to the Mount Holyoke Alumnae Association here.

The "other controls" would be, presumably, wage and price fixing.

Steelman did not specify what he had in mind about tighter curbs on consumer credit. It is probable that he was not thinking of stricter regulations on installment buying.

The recently announced revision of the rules affecting credit for this kind of buying, making up in severity what the first set of rules lacked, raised a roar of protest.

The presidential adviser may, therefore, have been referring to curbs on department store charge accounts and single payment loans.

75 Percent Limit

The new NPA rubber order limits natural rubber usage to 75 percent and total consumption (including synthetic) to 84 percent, of the new rubber used in the year preceding June 30.

ments granted to the rubber companies in special appeals cases, NPA officials said the result will be to limit the concerns to approximately their average monthly usage in the base year.

Earl W. Glen, chief of the NPA rubber division, said the proportion of synthetic rubber in tires will increase without "any particular quality deterioration," and the number of tires produced should be approximately the same as in the year ended last June 30. Officials have said previously that they expect no shortage of tires.

Glen predicted there will be some decrease in the number of tires produced between now and the end of the year. This will not be a "severe cutback," he said, because there is usually a fall decline in tire production.

The NPA order also requires importers of latex to offer at least 10 percent of the shipments to the Government's General Services Corp. for stockpiling. It formally makes the NPA responsible for allocation of Government-produced synthetic rubber.

In another order, the NPA set aside for the defense program the entire output of stainless steel containing columbium. Such steel resists corrosion and rust and is used in jet plane engines and surgical instruments.

Soviet Ready To Talk Peace For Japan

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 20 (AP).—John Foster Dulles announced today that the Russians have expressed readiness to hold informal discussions with the United States on a Japanese peace treaty.

The United States delegate to the United Nations said a time for the discussions "probably will be arranged within the next few days."

He issued the following statement:

"In response to an inquiry Mr. (Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob A.) Malik of the Soviet delegation has indicated that the Soviet government will be prepared to discuss with us informally the possibilities of a Japanese treaty."

A United States delegation spokesman said Dulles already has held informal discussions on the possibilities of a Japanese treaty with all members of the Far Eastern Commission. Dulles will go to Washington Monday to consult with the State Department.

The talks have proceeded very slowly, according to diplomatic sources, because some delegations fear the United States will insist on a "soft peace" for Japan.

The treaty has been held up for five years because Russia, a member of the wartime alliance against Japan, refused to help write one. Two months ago President Truman, after urging from Gen. Douglas MacArthur, decided to go ahead with the treaty—with or without Russian cooperation.

Other developments in the U. N. today included:

1. The Special Political Committee began working on guiding principles for settling the Chinese representation issue. Nationalist Chinese Delegate Liu Chieh warned against setting a precedent that would unleash "the dark forces of aggression."

2. Egypt demanded the Security Council stop Israel's alleged expulsion of Arabs from Palestine. The Council will meet later on that problem.

3. Russia assailed in the Economic and Social Council American and Australian plans for Korean relief and rehabilitation. The Soviet Union charged they would open the way for "vultures" to exploit the war-torn country.

Dulles Denies He Criticized Trygve Lie

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 20 (AP).—Russia's Jacob Malik said today American Delegate John Foster Dulles told him Trygve Lie has followed a "double-faced policy" as United Nations Secretary General, but that the Americans had to support Lie because of many promises.

Dulles promptly replied there was "no truth" in Malik's remarks and accused the Russians of trying to discredit Lie.

This development came during a day which saw Lie's stock for an extension of his term as Secretary General rise and saw Security Council members down an Indian attempt at a compromise.

Five of the 11 Council members expressed themselves against the Indian move or were known to be opposed to it. They were Cuba, Yugoslavia, Britain, United States and Norway. A sixth, Ecuador, announced it would abstain, but that it still backs Lie. A majority of seven is necessary to pass the Indian plan.

Faced with such opposition, the Indians were considering withdrawing the attempt when the Council meets Saturday.

Malik last week vetoed the reappointment of Lie for another five-year term. Nine members of the Security Council—United States, Britain, Cuba, Ecuador, Norway, Egypt, France, Yugoslavia and India voted for Lie, but the negative Soviet vote stymied the Council. The eleventh member, Nationalist China, abstained.

India had proposed that the 11 members put the names of two men in a secret baNot box; let the Big Five knock out the names of those it could not approve, and then let the Council pick a Secretary General from among the names remaining on the list, if any.

Today Malik said he has no candidate for the post, but that his government reserved its right to bring up a new nomination in the future.

Missing in action—Pfc. David Bradford of 1017 3d st se.

A 20-year-old Army private who wrote home that he had been in "some pretty tough spots but managed to get out of them," has since been killed in action.

Pfc. Bradford

Pvt. James L. Cunningham, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Cunningham Owens, was fatally wounded on October 3.

Cunningham was born in Greenville, S. C. His stepfather, Milton Owens, said that Cunningham attended school near his former address, 4401 Falls Terrace se., and enlisted in April, 1948.

Listed as "missing in action" is Pfc. David Bradford, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alec Bradford.

At 17, Pfc. Bradford left Dunbar Senior High School to enlist in 1948. He received his basic training at Fort Dix, and was then stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C., before he was shipped to Korea in July.

He was with the Twenty-fifth Division, Field Artillery Branch.

In a letter dated September 30, Pfc. Bradford told his family he had been fighting at the front since arriving in Korea. He hoped he would be home for Christmas, Mr. Bradford said.

Medical Men Fail to Ask Commissions

Three out of four District medical men who registered for the medical draft here last Monday are turning down an offer to take an Army commission and electing to await induction via the draft.

Of some 300 physicians, dentists and veterinarians who registered here, 76 replied in the negative to the question whether they would accept a Reserve commission, as against 23 answering in the affirmative.

Question Misunderstood

The question of a commission is one of a series which each registrant must answer by the end of this week, in accordance with the special medical draft.

At local Selective Service headquarters officials feel the medical men misunderstood the question on the commission, believing it to mean acceptance of a commission now. Actually, draft authorities say, the question is: Does the draft-liable medical man want a commission when the time comes for him to be inducted?

Will Lose Extra Pay

Col. Harold W. Glattly, Second Army surgeon, yesterday emphasized that the medical draft act is not intended to punish doctors, and that commissions will be available for qualified medical men at any point along the draft route. However, medical men inducted via the draft will lose the $100 a month extra pay given to those who volunteer for Reserve commissions.

Local draft headquarters announced yesterday that no more draftees will be inducted this month because Washington has reached its quota of 248 for October. The next contingent will be inducted November 7.

Gen. Lemnitzer Shifted to Troop Duty

Maj. Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, who has been director of foreign arms aid in the Department of Defense since the inception of the program, will leave his Pentagon post for duty with troops November 1.

Announcing this yesterday, the department said that Maj. Gen. Stanley L. Scott will replace Lemnitzer. Scott, who has been working closely with Lemnitzer on the mutual defense assistance program for several months, was commander of Army forces in Alaska from 1948 until last May.

The Army did not give Lemnitzer's new command, saying only that he will go to the Infantry Center, Fort Benning, Ga., for a temporary assignment. Friends, however, understood, that he will go through the paratrooper training course at Benning and then be given command of an airborne division, probably the Eleventh.

Lemnitzer, a 51-year old West Pointer, has been overdue for duty with troops.

During the war, Lemnitzer took part in the secret submarine mission to North Africa to contact French army leaders sympathetic to the Allied cause. Later he commanded the Thirty-fourth Antiaircraft Brigade and served with the Seventh Army in Sicily. In Italy, he commanded the American contingent of the Fifteenth Army group.

Walter Reed to Stop Buying Blood Available for Nothing

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A Defense Department policy pronouncement of last May that military hospitals stop buying blood when they can get it free finally reached Walter Reed Hospital yesterday.

All that stood in the way, department officials said, was the time needed for the Army Surgeon General's Office to put the policy into words, and another five days for the words to reach the hospital, way out north 16th st. from the Pentagon.

Meantime, it was admitted, the hospital has been buying blood from uniformed donors at $25 a pint, at the rate of 500 pints a month. Congress authorized such purchasing in 1945.

Though the blood-buying did "present an obstacle" to the local Red Cross program of free blood collections, officials said yesterday they haven't protested. Only recently, they explained, has the Red Cross supply increased to the point where the organization feels it can meet the hospital's needs.

They couldn't have done it locally last May, when Defense Secretary Louis Johnson announced adoption of the pay-only-when-you-have-to blood procurement policy, the Red Cross representatives said, except with help from the national collection program.

To meet the hospital's blood needs from now on, local Red Cross Blood Bank heads said they'll have to ask more area residents to roll up their sleeves more often.

It was on May 8 that Johnson announced the blood procurement policy. It was last Monday, October 16, before the Army Surgeon General's Office sent out instructions on its teletype circuit to Army hospitals.

But Walter Reed wasn't cut in on the telegram, because it gets such messages through routine delivery by the Army message center, it was explained.

On being questioned yesterday on the blood-buying matter, Walter Reed officials telephoned for the instructions. They were dispatched by Pentagon messenger.

Now, said Col. Michael L. Sheppeck, Walter Reed executive officer, the order is being studied. Hospital officials, he said, will confer with the Red Cross to put the hospital under the free blood program.

Korean Sky Pours Out Troops, Jeeps, Guns

...elieved ...f Command

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

COL. STANTON T. SMITH, JR., has been relieved of command of the fighter unit involved in the strafing of a Russian airfield near Suhkaya Rechka on Oct. 8. The Air Force said also that the two pilots believed to have taken part in the attack had been grounded pending filing of charges against them

ABOARD A PARATROOPER PLANE OVER KOREA, Oct. 20 (U.P.).—The Red light flashed the 10-minute warning.

"Get ready," yelled Lieut. Richard E. Gerrish, jr., 26, of Louisville, Ky.

Fourteen men struggled to their feet under heavy loads of radio equipment, batteries, knives, rifles, pistols, wire, ammunition, three days' rations, winter clothes and other items.

"Check equipment," bawled Gerrish over the noise of air rushing past the open door.

"You have plenty of time," he shouted. "Just relax. There'll be no flak. Is everybody happy?"

The answer came back in a roar: "Yeah!"

Mortar Shells Shoved Out

Two men shoved two packages of mortar shells out the door. In an instant, Gerrish was out. That was the signal that sent the 14 men rushingto the door.

And out of the sky teemed troops jeeps, howitzers and three-quarter-ton trucks just west of Namyangni and 11 miles from Sukchon as protective fighter planes swooped on enemy positions with rockets and jellied gasoline.

The well-equipped paratroopers dropped behind enemy lines above Pyongyang with a mission to cut the main arteries of escape left to the Red forces. The units of the Eleventh Airborne Division were dropped at two key towns—Sunchon and Sukchon—each on a primary highway and railroad leading from Pyongyang.

In one of the war's most spectacular operations, hardy young paratroopers, each carrying equipment and supplies weighing 85 to 100 pounds, were flown in two waves, the second hitting Sukchon at 3 p. m. on the heels of the first which dropped at Sunchon.

Heavy Weapons Unit

This correspondent flew over over the Sukchon drop zone in a C-47 of the 374th Troop Carrier Group's Twenty-first Squadron. This plane carried 15 paratroopers serving as units of a heavy weapons company.

The instant they hit the ground, they started moving to their assembly point to set up mortars, recoilless rifles, machine guns and lines of communication. Lieutenant Gerrish was the jump master and the only officer in the group.

The entire operation was carried off in minute detail, according to advance plans, except that it was delayed for several hours because of bad weather.

It was a bumpy ride on the route to the target along the west coast of Korea over water. But the sight of air-sea rescue service planes patroling the over-water route was comforting. After the troops hit the ground, no enemy gunfire was encountered, bearing out reconnaisance predictions.

This plane had probably as good a cross-section of the paratrooper action as any. We boarded at 12:20 p. m., and Capt. Lawrence T. Haddock, Snow Hill, Md., once a high school classmate of this reporter, started his engines 15 minutes later. The paratroopers aboard were, almost to a man, in gay spirits.

Few Are Pensive

"This is no different from any other jump," said Pfc. Frank P. Williams, 20, of Danville, Va., making his sixth jump.

Only one or two paratroopers were pensive and seemed reluctant to talk. But not 24-year-old Sergt. Roy Burnett of Lancaster, Ky., making his twenty-seventh jump, nor 20-year-old Corpl. Donald Koger of Muncie, Ind. Koger sat grinning and allowed, between chomps at his gum, that he believed "in being happy."

Pvt. Joseph Darby made the point that he was a Marylander, like the pilot and this reporter, and later, when he went out the door, he yelled:

"Say hello to Frederick (Md.)."

After the signal to jump, 11 men got out without a hitch, but the twelfth slipped and fell.

"Come on, get out of here," the two behind him screamed.

I will never forget the terrified look on the man's face as he went out the door.

Korean Relief Needs Put at $146 Million

Gen. Douglas MacArthur advised the Pentagon yesterday that war-ravaged South Korea will need food and other relief supplies costing an estimated $146,500,000 from now until June 30.

The Army estimated the cost and said it covers only preliminary requirements figured out after the Army took over Korean relief work from the Economic Cooperation Administration September 15.

MacArthur reported that about 1,682,000 tons of supplies will be needed, including 610,000 tons of food, 222,000 tons of industrial material and equipment and 16,000 tons of medical supplies.

The Army said a substantial portion of the supplies will be furnished by other United Nations members.

Supply offers accepted by the Allied Commander in Korea include 40,000 tons of rice from Thailand; 11 tons of soap, 20,000 tons of rice and 500 units of whole blood and medical supplies from the Philippines, 500 tons of sugar and medical supplies from Denmark; $40,000 from Ethiopia; 125 tons of cod liver oil from Iceland; unspecified quantities of medical supplies from Israel; $50,000 from Lebanon, 11 tons of rubber from Liberia, 5000 tons of wheat from Pakistan, two million dollars from Uruguay, and unspecified quantities of medical supplies, meat and food from Argentina, Venezuela and Mexico.

Britain Reaffirms Exile of Seretse

LONDON, Oct. 20 (AP).—Britain reaffirmed today its order exiling a Negro king from his homeland because he married a white woman.

Commonwealth Relations Minister Patrick Gordon-Walker said reasons which led the government early this year to banish Seretse Khama from Britain's Bechuanaland Protectorate still stand.

Labor Must Get Its Share, Europe Told

Marshall Plan Administrator William C. Foster yesterday called for a fairer division of the benefits of European recovery for European labor.

His pointed appeal, made in a speech here, was part of a new and deliberate drive of the Economic Cooperation Administration for a specific social and political goal.

The campaign was launched the previous day in Rome, by M. Leon Dayton, chief of the ECA mission to Italy. He bluntly accused Italian businessmen of being profiteers, and warned them they must make a fairer distribution of their earnings with their workers.

By no accident, Foster made the point again yesterday, in some what more diplomatic language. Speaking to a group of 85 industrialists and workers from 12 Marshall Plan countries, here to obtain technical information on American railroad practices, Foster said:

"We lay great stress on the necessity for sharing of the fruits of productivity . . . We have found that a mass market and mass production are available only to the extent there is mass purchasing power. Retention of the fruits of mass production in the hands of only a few means that only a few can buy.

From other ECA officials, it was learned that the agency is concerned about the practices of some European management, particularly in Italy and France, in draining off for themselves an unfair share of the gains which European recovery has brought about.

Unless recovery benefits reach the level of the worker, it is felt, the prime political goal of the Marshall Plan—stability of Democratic governments based on economic improvement and equity—will be lost.

As one high official put it yesterday, "For the first couple of years of the Marshall Plan the problem was to bake the cake. Now it's baked, and there's a little cake to be shared. It's time to make sure it's shared fairly."

Hospital Death Rate In Korea War Lowest

Surgeon General Raymond Bliss of the Army said yesterday preliminary evidence indicates that the hospital death rate among American casualties in Korea is the lowest for any military campaign in the Nation's history.

Just back from a survey of medical conditions in the Far East, Bliss gave this report to a meeting of consultants to the Army medical library:

Data at hand indicates that among every 100 cases admitted to hospitals in Korea, there has been only one death, compared with three in World War II and eight in World War I.

Bliss said there have been no cases of tetanus, cholera, typhoid fever, typhus fever or plague among American troops.

Stassen Snubs Pravda Attack On Peace Talk Bid to Stalin

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20 (AP).—Harold E. Stassen said today he refused to accept the Pravda rejection of his bid for a face-to-face peace talk with Prime Minister Stalin and still awaited a direct answer from the Soviet leader.

The University of Pennsylvania president issued a statement answering the official Communist Party newspaper's description of him as a "shameless warmonger and feverishly active political campaigner with a thirst for self advertisement."

"I do not accept the Pravda story as an answer to my October 1 letter to Premier Stalin . . . I will await an answer from Premier Stalin. If he is sincere in his expressed desire for world peace, he will answer me in due time."

Pravda Puts Skids Under Stassen Plea

MOSCOW, Oct. 20 (AP)—Pravda put the skids today under Harold E. Stassen's bid for a face-to-face talk with Prime Minister Stalin on world peace, declaring Stassen himself "understands fully the absurdity of his demands."

The official Communist Party newspaper dismissed as a dirty, clumsy election campaign trick the letter Stassen, a Republican leader who is president of the University of Pennsylvania, dispatched to Stalin through the Soviet Embassy in Washington, October 2.

Stassen had said he sought the conference in an effort to stop "the drift toward war." Pravda called him insolent, ridiculous, a slanderer, a shameless warmonger and a feverishly active political campaigner with a "thirst for self-advertisement." The letter was described as an advertising essay intended to play on "the attraction of peace for American voters" in the coming congressional elections.

(In Reading, Pa., to deliver a speech, Stassen received the news of Pravda's blast with the observation: "Very interesting." He had no further comment.)

"Mask of Peacemaker"

"Harold Stassen's program is a program of the armaments drive and further intensification of war preparations," said the Pravda article, written by commentator Yuri Viktorov. "The hastily donned mask of a peacemaker cannot conceal his real face."

Pravda made it plain the Kremlin does not consider Stassen's letter worth a formal answer or, indeed, that the Russians consider it was meant to receive any formal answer.

"In his letter Stassen demands no more, no less than that the Soviet Union alter its policy," Pravda said. "It is not difficult to see that Stassen is not only insolent but also ridiculous in advancing this fantastic claim, a claim which excludes every possibility of any kind of a serious attitude to the 'document' concocted by the president of the University of Pennsylvania in coöperation with the inveterate warmongers (John Foster) Dulles and (Gen. Dwight D.) Eisenhower.

"Stassen himself understands fully the absurdity of his demands. Yes, but this is the real purpose of his enterprise, having advanced a clearly impossible demand, to raise a noise about the alleged intractability of the USSR and in this way to clear the road for a further even more aggressive policy of United States ruling circles, one of the supporters of which is Stassen.

Stassen's 'Dirty Game'

"This is the true meaning of Stassen's dirty game.

"The truth about the Soviet Union's peace policy and the Soviet people's consistent struggle for peace and international cooperation makes its way despite all malicious contrivances of imperialist propaganda."

Pravda recalled that Stassen once had talked personally with Stalin (in Moscow in 1947) and that he was a Republican presidential aspirant in 1948. It cited speeches by Stassen earlier this year in which he called for Western intensification of the cold war, development of an offensive strategy against the USSR, and preparations "to bring war directly to the centers of Communist power."

Stassen said in a radio speech from Washington August 15 Russia should be notified that "war will come to Moscow, to the Urals and to the Ukraine" if Communist imperialist forces launch further aggression anywhere in the world.

In Interests of Peace

In his October 2 letter, Stassen informed Stalin that he wrote "in the interest of world peace and freedom and progress for mankind." He went on from there to tell the Soviet leader that Russia should stop attacking churches in the Balkans, should join in strengthening the United Nations, should let tourists and traders enter the Soviet Union and take other steps in the interest of world peace. He criticized the Kremlin's attitude toward the Communist aggression in Korea.

Rules Issued For McCarran Law Listings

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The Justice Department issued regulations yesterday for what promises to be a long and worrisome process of registering "Communist Action" organizations under the McCarran Act.

Monday is the deadline provided in the law for registration of such organizations and their members. But up to last night no organization had registered and nobody, except newspaper men curious about their content, had called for individual registration forms.

Nor was it expected there would be a last-minute rush to register before the deadline. The Communist Party has announced it would not register and there was no doubt here that satellite and subsidiary organizations would follow its lead.

Failure to register under the law will not bring the FBI swarming down on officers of the recalcitrant organizations. The law itself provides cumbersome machinery for its enforcement which cannot even be set in motion until the organization is cited before a five-man Subversive Activities Control Board. President Truman had not appointed the board late yesterday.

Once the board is functioning, these steps must be followed in bringing action against an organization for failing to register:

1. The Attorney General requests the board to order the organization to register.

2. The Attorney General must then prove by evidence, which the organization may attempt to controvert, that the organization is required by the act to register.

3. If the board finds the organization is a "Communist Action" or Communist Front organization in the meaning of the act, the Justice Department may then bring action against its president, vice president, treasurer and directors for failure to register.

A Justice spokesman estimated it might require two years to take action against the first organization to be cited, which, it was presumed, would be the Communist Party.

Individuals will have an even longer period of grace. While it is incumbent upon the individual to determine whether his name has been filed by an organization to which he belongs and to see that his name actually is registered, no action can be taken against him for failure to register until his organization has been passed on by the board. Obviously, it was pointed out, no individual can be classed as a member of a questionable organization until the status of the organization itself has been established.

7000 North Koreans Captured

More than 7,000 North Korean soldiers were captured Wednesday by United Nations forces to bring the total bag to an estimated 80,000, the Defense Department reported yesterday.

An Army spokesman said side roads leading north out of Pyongyang, captured North Korean capital, are choked with Communist troops fleeing toward Manchurian border. He said the crowded highways probably will give U. N. aircraft a "field day."

The spokesman reported that the United States Twenty-fourth Division took about 5600 prisoners. Elements of six Communist divisions are trapped in the area and have broken into smaller groups, although some include as many as 1000 men.

Other North Korean bands are being eliminated in the east coast areas of Samchok, Utchin, Kumsan, Muju, Hoesan and Changeu.

2 More Minesweepers Sunk Off North Korea

WONSAN, Korea, Oct. 20 (U.P.). A flotilla of Japanese minesweepers chartered by the United Nations stopped work in heavily-mined North Korean waters today, after one of the vessels was sunk, a naval spokesman said today.

The spokesman said that the deadly Soviet-made sea mines were so thick that the Navy has been afraid to land supplies shipped by ocean. The Wonsan landing strip is being used for air freight shipments, but it was breaking up under the huge loads.

The mine fields compare with the most extensive laid during the Pacific war. Three United States minesweepers have been sunk. The Japanese vessel sank yesterday, with 17 or 18 killed and one missing. An ROK sweeper also was lost, with 15 missing, according to the Naval spokesman.

Freedom Bell Pierces Curtain

BREMERHAVEN, Oct. 20 (AP). The world freedom bell penetrated the Iron Curtain tonight under the tightest security blackout since the Russian blockade of Berlin.

The huge symbol of liberty was on the last leg of the journey to West Berlin, where it will ring out its anti-Communist message to millions over a vast radio network in dedication ceremonies Tuesday—United Nations Day.

The 10-ton bronze bell, donated to Allied West Berlin by the Crusade for Freedom movement in the United States, already has aroused the Soviet East Berlin Communist press, which sees its propaganda value in the East-West cold war.

The Red-controlled newspapers have been raging against it a week in advance. Press reports said Russian zone railway authorities complained it was too large for their freight cars.

The United States Army imposed the blackout in apparent fear of Communist sabotage when the bell arrived today in this West German port on the Navy transport General Blatchford.

Spectators got only a brief glimpse of its unloading. Despite Communist claims, it disappeared into a freight car and was soon off on the 120-mile trip through the Soviet occupation zone to Berlin.

Paratroops, Allies Link Up; Trap Reds

the last big opening of that counteroffensive.

Air observers said the only Red troop movements they could see after the drop were north of Suchon and Sukchon.

They saw none between the drop area and Pyongyang to the south.

The trap thus may have been sprung too late.

The Reds may have succeeded in pulling out all but their last ditch defenders from their one-time capital.

Bad weather forced delay of the airborne operation from Thursday and postponed it twice on Friday.

Associated Press Correspondent Leif Erickson reported from United States Eighth Army headquarters in Seoul, the southern capital, that if the drop could have been made Thursday—as speeding Allied armored columns raced into Pyongyang—it would have trapped a much greater bag of fleeing Reds.

Also, Erickson said, there would have been a greater chance then to have captured some of the Red command staff charged with the defense of Pyongyang.

Kim May Be in Siberia

North Korea's Red Premier Kim Il Sung apparently had escaped to Manchuria or Siberia. His Soviet-trained general staff and political advisers have fled their old headquarters too, probably to wage mountain guerilla warfare against United Nations mop-up forces.

The delay of the drop also may have cut the chances of the parachutists to achieve their second goal—the rescue of American prisoners of war.

Some captured Americans had been prodded out of Pyongyang toward Manchuria by the Reds just before the Allied forces stabbed into the city Tuesday.

Three hungry, bearded and tattered survivors of a POW death march from Seoul to Pyongyang told the story. They had escaped their captors and rejoined American forces in Pyongyang Friday.

They said the group sent north, and themselves, survived a "death march" of some 300 American POWs from Seoul to Pyongyang in late September and early October. Seoul is 160 road miles from Pyongyang.

Beaten and Bayonetted

During the march, they said, Americans dies "like flies" from starvation, cold, pneumonia and dysentery.

Those who fell down were beaten and bayonetted by their Red guards. How many died they did not know.

The three survivors had dropped through a trapdoor into a Pyongyang schoolhouse basement and hidden there since Saturday. They said they were told in Seoul that Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, commander of the United States Twenty-fourth Division who disappeared when Taejon fell last July, was in Pyonyang.

But when they reached Pyongyang, they were told that Dean had died in Seoul. There was no confirmation of either report.

The men who made the air drop were under the command of Col. Frank S. Bowen, San Francisco, of the One Hundred Eighty-Seventh Regiment, Eleventh Airborne Division.

As they hit the ground they began moving immediately toward Sunchon, 30 air miles northeast of Pyongyang, and Sukchon, 28 air miles northwest of Pyongyang. By road, the towns are apparently 35 miles from Pyongyang.

Chuted down to them were 105-mm. howitzers, 90-mm. guns, jeeps and trailers. It was the heaviest equipment ever dropped in combat.

The troops hit one of the smallest jump areas ever attempted—only a little over a mile long and a half mile wide.

The transport planes which brought the men to the area circled westward over the Yellow Sea to avoid Red anti-aircraft batteries, then wheeled inland to the jump site.

After they delivered their load of men, the big planes returned to Kimpo field near Seoul and immediately loaded additional supplies for airdrop to the troops.

American fighter planes rocketed and strafed the jump site in the broad Taedong River valley for 45 minutes before the men began leaping at 2 p. m. Friday (midnight Thursday, EST).

Drop Made from 700 Feet

Fires were still burning in the timber when the paratroopers stepped out of their transports at 700 feet.

The fighter planes wheeled and darted protectively around the troops, but there was no challenge from the sky or the ground.

MacArthur watched the show intently from his unarmed but fighter-protected plane.

Brig. Gen. E. K. Wright, operations officer, charted the operation on a map in the general's plane as it unfolded below.

After the drop, MacArthur landed at Pyongyang's last airfield and was told by Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, commander of the United States First Cavalry Division, that the field had been secured only four hours before.

The airborne assault marked an anniversary for MacArthur. It was six years ago to the day that he landed on Leyte in the Philippines in World War II.

There remained only some slight pockets of Red resistance in the southwest quarter of the city.

At the airfield, MacArthur congratulated Maj. Gen. William A. Tunner, commander of the Far East Air Forces' Combat Cargo Command.

"A magnificent performance you put on today," MacArthur said. The United Nations commander returned to Tokyo after a 35-minute stay.

In Pyongyang, Red troops were surrendering singly and in groups. Associated Press Correspondent Tom Lambert reported from the captured city that the Red Korean government had fled.

He said the official residence of Communist Premier Kim was deserted of Reds. Inside the house, Lambert found only curious South Korean soldiers looking for mementoes.

Russian Goods There

Lambert said there was a wealth of evidence that the Russians had been in Pyongyang. He found newspapers printed in the Russian language, Russian magazines denouncing "American aggression," and Russian-made goods, clothing and cosmetics in a boarded up store.

Pyongyang residents had come out of hiding on Friday. They stood by the hundreds along Stalin street, main thoroughfare of Pyongyang. Some cheered the American and South Korean troops, many waved South Korean and United Nations flag.

"Welcome, United Nations forces" banners bloomed all over the city.

Pyongyang's next role probably will be that of headquarters for a United Nations military government of North Korea.

It will also be the headquarters for a huge mop-up operation against Reds in North Korea.

American troops are committed to remain in Korea until that job is over. But apparently neither they nor the British Commonwealth troops assisting them will go to the touchy Manchurian and Siberian borders.

MacArthur has indicated that South Korean troops will be used for any operations necessary near the borders.

A major fight appeared to be underway for Chinnampo, big port 30 miles southwest of Pyongyang. It was under attack by the U. S. Twenty-fourth Division. At least six big fires burned in the city as MacArthur's plane passed over it Friday to and from the airborne assault site.

There were no fresh reports on operations northeast of Pyongyang where Korean Republican troops continued pushing toward the Siberian border.

Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, who directed the Allied liberation of Seoul, was placed in command of all United Nations troops operating in northeastern Korea.

280 Prisoners Died Like Flies, 3 Death March Survivors Say

PYONGYANG, Korea, Oct. 20 (AP).—Three tattered American survivors today said unestimated scores of United States prisoners of war "died like flies" on a terrifying 160-mile death march from Seoul to Pyongyang.

The trio said 283 began that horror march, under guard of brutal North Korean Reds. They indicated comparatively few survived, but did not know the number. The trail of those survivors now leads 150 miles farther north to the Manchurian border.

The three who escaped said the American prisoners were beaten and shot by the Reds, strafed mistakenly by an American pilot who thought they were a Red Army column, exposed, starved and given no medical attention.

The surviving prisoners may include 90 others who made an original total of 373 moved north from Seoul. Those still alive were shipped north of Pyongyang on October 14—only five days before the arrival of liberating forces.

The fate of Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, missing commander of the United States Twenty-fourth Division, remained a mystery.

The three survivors today said they were told in Seoul that General Dean was in Pyongyang. But in this Red capital they were told Dean had died in Seoul. There was no confirmation of either report.

(United States Defense Department casualty reports list 4260 Americans missing in action.)

The trio of bearded escapees said three or four Russians visited the American prisoners in Pyongyang. "They just kind of smiled," the three former prisoners told correspondents, but did not speak.

Atrocity reports swelled. The commander in chief of the South Korean army, Maj. Gen. Chung Il Kwon, said in Seoul that 80 political prisoners had been burned alive with flaming gasoline—only three days ago.

The massacre took place Tuesday at Koksan, 50 air miles southeast of Pyongyang. The pitiful charred bodies were viewed also by Maj. James H. Houseman, an American military adviser to the general.

The three liberated Americans, long-haired, bedraggled, but happy, are Air Force Capt. William Locke, 30, of Route 2, Enfield, N. C., whose wife and daughter are at High Point, N. C.; Army Lieut. Alexander Macaroumis, 27, Lowell, Mass., and Sergt. Takeshi Kumagai of Honolulu.

Locke crash-landed a Mustang fighter plane behind Communist lines near Waegwan August 17. Macaroumis and Kumagai were taken prisoner July 29, the former near Hadong and the latter when the Reds took Taejon.

They escaped from the Korean Reds Saturday when friendly Koreans told them of a trapdoor in the school house which was their prison here. They hid out until American and South Korean forces arrived in Pyongyang yesterday, then walked happily through the main street of Pyongyang arm in arm with three Korean students who aided them.

The trio said the Communists told them they were transferred from Seoul to Pyongyang for "safety." Locke said he pleaded with North Korean officials not to move the prisoners from Seoul and to give medical attention to the wounded.

To this plea, Locke said the Koreans replied "we already got enough atrocities listed against us, so a few more won't make any difference." Locke said that during the march Americans "died like flies from starvation, cold, pneumonia and dysentery."

When an American plane strafed the POW group on the march, obviously mistaking them for Reds, 17 were wounded, he said.

The three said the Reds who marched them from Seoul to Pyongyang "beat the boys." They added:

"If they could not walk they shot them. Some of the men were carrying their buddies on their backs. Guys who fell down were beaten and bayoneted by Red guards."

Locke said the guards shot Americans who could not keep up.

All three accused the North Koreans of murdering and starving the Americans and failing to give them necessary medical treatment. Locke said 373 prisoners were moved out of Seoul September 20 as American Marines advanced on the city.

"We knew something was up," he said, "but did not know of the (September 15) Inchon landing."

He said they could hear artillery fire in the distance.

Macaroumis, a bearded, barelegged giant in tattered fatigue dress, said he saw the North Koreans shoot and kill one American prisoner on the march. He added he was beaten by Communist civilians. Locke said he was struck and kicked. Kumagai said the Reds killed his lieutenant.

They were not permitted to take blankets or bedding. Some men died of exposure.

The Honolulu-born Japanese said North Korean guards told him the surviving American POWS would be taken to Hampojin, on the Yalu River on the Korean-Manchurian border, some 150 miles northwest of Pyongyang.

Other reports from civilian informants in Pyongyang said American and South Korean war prisoners were moved by rail to the border towns of Aoji, Lajin and Ungi in the extreme northwest corner of Red Korea.

During the march to Pyongyang the Reds denied American requests for water.

Once an American C-47 dropped 36 cases of food rations to them, but "the bastard North Koreans took them, although our men were starving."

When the decimated group of survivors reached Pyongyang they were placed in a school house. Civilians were allowed to visit them. Some brought cigarettes.

Among the visitors were three students who smuggled them rice and water and bedding. The students told of a trap-door in the floor. When the order was given October 14 for the Americans to move north again, Locke, Macaroumis and Kumagai dropped through the trap-door and hid under the school.

The other Americans were moved on north and their fate was not known.

U. S. Seeks Way to Rush Food To Yugoslavia

Several Methods Studied

What is not agreed, however, is how the aid can be supplied. There are several methods under consideration, all "legal" in the narrow sense, but none of them in accordance with any mandate or declaration of intent from Congress.

Therefore the Administration's problem is to adopt the one that is most defensible, get to work on it right away, and go to Congress five weeks from now for retroactive blessing and a grant of authority—and funds—for the future. Here are some possibilities being considered for the interim program:

1. The Commodity Credit Corp. could—as it has done before, with justification—put a minimum, token, price on some of its semi-perishable, rapidly spoiling surpluses. It has some beans, dried milk and eggs and other dairy fats. But there are not enough of these to make much of a dent in the impending Yugoslavian famine.

$11 Millions Unobligated

2. The Export-Import Bank could permit Yugoslavia to buy food with some of the 11 million dollars still unobligated from an earlier loan. Ordinarily, however, Export-Import Bank loans are not to be used for such apparent "down the drain" purposes.

3. In return for undertakings from Tito to supply the United States with strategic materials, the Export-Import Bank could grant a new loan, or the Munitions Board could foot the bill, for disbursements to Yugoslavia from the CCC grain surpluses.

The trouble here, however, is that Yugoslavia is already committed, in repayment of other loans, to supply all the strategic materials it can produce for more than a year in the future.

4. The Economic Cooperation Administration could give an extra several million dollars to some Marshall Plan country, for it to buy grain which it would then "give" to Yugoslavia.

Would Be Legal

This would be quite legal, but certainly nothing ever contemplated by Congress when it authorized the Marshall Plan. If these schemes were followed, the Administration would of course not attempt to justify it to Congress as being within Congress' intent, but only as an available mechanism to do what was considered essential for Yugoslavia's defense against Russian reconquest.

5. Acting under authority granted him in the Mutual Defense Assistance Program, the President could use up to 10 percent of the funds allocated to the North Atlantic nations to aid the military security of another "eligible" nation—in this case, Yugoslavia.

Several problems present themselves along this route. In the first place, it is stretching a point a long way to call food a military item, and it might create a troublesome precedent if it were done.

Second, the MDAP law probably requires Tito to sign a bilateral agreement, making him virtually a member of the North Atlantic Alliance, before he could receive aid. Here there is a grave doubt not merely whether Tito would agree, but whether the NATO nations would have him.

None Are Happy Solutions

All in all, then, none of the conceivable interim methods are ideal, or happy solutions. But one of them, or a combination, must be seized on, according to the experts.

At his press conference yesterday, Acheson said he hoped to indicate to the Yugoslavs next week what can be done for them. He also indicated strongly that new legislation would be needed for the longer range program, presumably continuing throughout the winter. The best guess was that the Administration would ask for funds, to be used directly for food, and for the program to be administered by ECA.

Such a request, of course, is certain to start a heated debate in Congress, where no love is lost on Tito and his belligerently Communist government. But in the appeal, the State Department will be supported to the hilt by the Defense Department. It feels that Yugoslavia, the lone successful renegade from the Soviet bloc, must be supported. Though its divisions have little if any heavy equipment, they are felt to be well trained and fierce anti-Russian fighters as long as Tito is in a position to lead them.

Safety Boast Leads to Raid On Gambling

LA SALLE, Ill, Oct. 20 (AP).—The Mayor and police chief of LaSalle today closed the gambling establishments of Thomas J. Cawley, who had told the Senate Crime Committee that city officials don't interfere with his operations.

Mayor Matt Bildhauer and Police Chief Edward Kasprowicz closed all LaSalle gambling operations, including Cawley's bookmaking establishment, crap games, punchboard, "lucky bowls," and Peoria baseball pool.

They said they also closed all gambling in 85 establishments, mostly taverns, including largely punchboards and the "lucky bowls." They closed slot machines in six private clubs. No slot machines have been operating except in the clubs.

Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), head of the Senate Crime Committee, said in Chicago Wednesday Cawley had testified he "plays both sides of the fence politically" in LaSalle and has "no trouble from any law enforcement people" about his gambling places.

Kefauver said Cawley testified the "Mayor of LaSalle" would keep anyone from interfering with Cawley's operations. Kefauver said Cawley named the present sheriff, mayor and police chief and added, "they all let me go." He testified LaSalle is "wide open."

The mayor and police chief did not comment on the reasons for the closing order.

A short time later, all gambling in Peru was closed down. The order was issued by Mayor Frank Konetshny to Police Chief Fred Mathieu. Officers toured the city's 28 taverns and ordered all punchboads and "lucky bowls" out. Police also ordered slot machines removed from three private clubs.

Nurse Says Seagrave Helped Both Sides

RANGOON, Oct. 20 (U.P.).—Witnesses for "Burma Surgeon" Gordon Seagrave testified today the American doctor was friendly toward Burmese Government soldiers and showed no disrespect to either his nurses or the army.

Seagrave, on trial charged with aiding Karen rebels, gave the Karens no medical aid not given other soldiers, Matron Naomi of Seagrave's hospital staff said.

She said Seagrave told her to give medical supplies to the Karens "because if we don't, they will take them anyway."

Bishop Sees Husband Slay Wife, Kill Himself

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Oct. 20 (AP).—A Mormon bishop went with Mrs. Betta Mullins, 43, to the home of her husband last night hoping to effect a reconciliation.

Instead, Bishop Walter L. Cox reported to police:

Francis Mullins, 47, fired two shots into his wife, fatally wounding her, then killed himself.

The bishop said Mullins had asked him to bring Mrs. Mullins.

2d Big Gale In Week Aims At Florida

TAMPA, Fla., Oct. 20 (U.P.).—The long, hurricane-scarred Florida peninsula made frantic preparations tonight for its second dangerous blow of the week as 100-mile-an-hour winds plowed the Gulf toward West Coast resorts.

East Coast residents still were cleaning up the 15-million-dollar damage left by a 125-mile tropical tempest earlier in the week when the Gulf storm boiled up and threatened to give little notice before striking.

The Miami Weather Bureau said hurricane hunter planes recorded winds up to 90 miles an hour and gusts up to 100 miles an hour. The big blow was 225 miles southwest of Tampa at 6:30 p. m. EST, rumbling along east-northeastward at a 15-to-18-mile clip. It was expected to hit the mainland tonight.

The weather bulletin warned residents there was little time left to evacuate the highly vulnerable beaches and low coastal areas.

"All interests in the West Florida counties from Citrus southward to Lee should make immediate preparations for hurricane winds," Storm Forecaster Grady Norton said. "Tides will become abnormally high."

The storm pointed its fury toward the heart of the State's 200-million-dollar citrus crop and toward the same rich industrial and playground area that was pounded for four days last month with up to nine-foot tides in the backwash of a hurricane.

Thousands of residents along Sunset Beach, Indian Rocks, Clearwater Beach and the lowlands were being evacuated to inland cities. The Air Force flew its planes out of MacDill Base. The highway patrol and the Coast Guard roamed the vulnerable areas to sound the warning.

Definite assurance that Miami Beach will present little evidence of storm damage within two or three weeks has been given by city officials there.

FCC Color Ruling To Be Attacked In a Single Suit

Pilot Radio Corporation cleared the way yesterday for a single court test of the Federal Communications commission's order approving Columbia Broadcasting System's controversial color television system.

The firm announced in New York that it was dropping its injunction suit there and would intervene in a similar action filed in Chicago by Radio Corporation of America and National Broadcasting Co. They also are trying to block the order.

As soon as the FCC heard about the decision, it announced it was dropping plans to ask the Chicago court to transfer the RCA-NBC suit to New York.

said Korea was a topic. They said Russia and Red China had agreed to rush 150,000 Chinese Red troops and Russian armor to North Korea if United Nations forces crossed the thirty-eighth parallel. The U. N. forces have since crossed that boundary and are now striking deep into North Korea, against limited resistance.

The countries represented here, beside the Soviet Union, are Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Romania, Hungary and East Germany. Among those present is the Communist woman chief of Romanian foreign affairs, Ana Pauker. The chairman of today's meeting was Czech Deputy Premier Zdenek Fierlinger.

U. S. Sure to Reject Protest

(Any Soviet protest against the alleged arming of western Germany is sure to be rejected, Secretary Acheson indicated at his press conference today.

(It simply is not true, the Secretary said, that the new police force of 30,000 men in western Germany is the nucleus of a German army.

(He called the west German police a riot squad, and contrasted it with the so-called police force in the Soviet zone, armed with tanks, artillery and planes.)

The announcement of the meeting followed by a few hours Russia's warning to the United States, Britain and France that Russia will not tolerate a revival of the "German regular army in West Germany."

The warning, contained in identical notes to Washington, London and Paris and broadcast from Moscow, rejected charges by the three Western powers that the People's Police of Communist-ruled East Germany is in fact a military organization. Russia charged that the Western nations were reviving German military might in their own zones.

France alone among the main Western powers has been holding out against the rearming of West Germany. The United States is for it. Britain accepts the idea, but would like the other North Atlantic Pact nations to rearm first.

The Germans themselves are divided.

Adenauer Against Remilitarization

West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer called on his people tonight to take part in west Europe's defense, but ruled out remilitarization. Speaking at a congress of his Christian Democratic Union Party at Goslar, he said.:

"Nobody has asked such (militar commitments. No offer has be made either."

The Moscow radio's report the Prague conference said:

"On the initiative of the go ernment of the Union of the S viet Socialist Republics, a co ference of the Ministers of Forei Affairs of the USSR, Albania, Bu garia, Czechoslovakia, Poland, R mania, Hungary and the (east) Ge man Democratic Republic open on October 20 in Prague.

"The conference will discu the questions which have arisen connection with the New Yo conference of the three powe (the United States, Britain an France) on September 19 on th remilitarization of western Ge many.

The Foreign Ministers of th United States, Britain an France told Russia September 1 to keep hand off western Ge many. They moved to end th state of war with Germany an to strengthen her industrially an defensively, but announced ther is no call for recreating a na tional army in the western zones

Incommunicado

One unanswered question in the disquieting arrest of Robert S. Williams, jr., on an indecent exposure charge is why he was held incommunicado for nearly four hours. Mr. Williams pleaded to be allowed to telephone his daughter, but police refused him permission. The incident is illustrative because there have been other reports of instances in which Washington police have held persons 24 hours or longer without allowing them to communicate with their families. Although the questioning of suspects is unquestionably necessary, it is hard to see any good reason for causing anguish to innocent members of the detained person's family. Is this denial of ordinary human decency a regular practice?

Mack-Rakers Of 1950

The Hanley letter which came to light a few days ago in New York has touched off one of the most spirited contests in epithet hurling in our recent political history. Representative Walter A. Lynch, Democratic-Liberal candidate for Governor, charged Governor Dewey and Lieutenant Governor Hanley with a specific violation of the Penal Code, demanded impeachment of Mr. Dewey, and declared that Mr. Hanley would not be seated by the Senate if he should be elected. Governor Dewey replied that his opponents were conducting the "lowest and dirtiest, ugliest campaign" ever waged in his experience. He revived the "paving-block" incident involving Edward J. Flynn and said that the Flynn candidates were the "evil people responsible for the reeking mess in New York City."

Mr. Hanley, who is running for the United States Senate against Senator Lehman, went on the air and denied all the sinister inferences that had been drawn from his indiscreet letter to Representative Macy. Instead of being coerced into abandoning his campaign for the Republican nomination as Governor, as his critics had charged, he asserted that he had gone to Governor Dewey on his own initiative and asked him (Dewey) to run again, at the same time releasing the Governor from his pledge of support to his (Hanley's) candidacy. "Nothing financial was discussed even remotely," he said. A few days later, he declared, he lunched with Mr. Dewey, learned that he could draw his State pension if elected to the Senate, and was given assurance that a State job would be found for him if he should run for the Senate and lose.

Congressman Lynch then charged that "to avoid inevitable consequences of his perfidy" Governor Dewey was "throwing Joe Hanley to the dogs to save himself." Meanwhile, Governor Dewey, relying for authority on Edward J. Flynn's You're the Boss and Jim Farley's Story, declared that the late John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and other wealthy friends had assumed $200,000 in obligations that Franklin D. Roosevelt had incurred in opening the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, thus making possible his first gubernatorial campaign. Mr. Dewey said that he was not criticizing but only lamenting that the Republicans did not have a Raskob. Apparently this was all that a diligent search for scandal involving the Democrats at Albany could turn up at the moment.

Apparently as an offset to the Hanley letter, a New York newspaper dug up a letter from Senator Lehman to Alger Hiss expressing Mr. Lehman's sympathy for and confidence in Mr. Hiss after he had appeared before the Committee on Un-American Activities to deny Whittaker Chambers' story of getting secret Government documents from Hiss while he (Chambers) was a Communist agent. The letter was written August 6, 1948, long before the conviction of Hiss for perjury because he denied the Chambers story. Obviously the purpose of broadcasting the letter now is the same as that behind the exploitation of the Hanley letter—to discredit a candidate by innuendo. As if to prevent Albany from capturing all the headlines with this kind of campaigning, Edward Corsi, the Republican candidate for Mayor of New York City, has accused his Democratic-Liberal opponent, Ferdinand Pecora, of having the support of Frank Costello and the whole underworld.

Of course, it is the business of politicians to smoke out corruption wherever it exists, but the strained effort to create the appearance of corruption when there is no evidence to support it is a shameful perversion of the democratic process. Theodore Roosevelt used to say that "the men with the muck-rake are often indispensable to the well-being of society, but only if they know when to stop raking the muck." Men running for office seldom do. And too many of them are ready to create "muck" out of rumor, misfortune and ill-founded malice. It is a high price to pay for victory at the polls.

Testy President

Once in a while the President is justified in his irritation, and this was the case on Wednesday, though he appears to have picked the wrong person at whom and through whom to vent his spleen, namely the responsible correspondent of the responsible St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The President has an exalted view of his august office. He thinks of it as something apart from himself. Nothing, accordingly, can have been more nettling than to see the Wake Island meeting reported in some of the public prints almost as if it were a parley between two independent sovereigns. In some comment, indeed, Mr. Truman appeared in a sort of tributary relation, engaged solely in gathering political capital from a man that Mr. Stassen, for instance, regards as a Supreme Being. The conference, of course, was a meeting between Mr. Truman as Commander in Chief and General MacArthur as his commander in the Far East. It would have been most unbecoming, therefore, to have made political decisions at Wake Island—such as a decision over the future of Formosa. Actually, as the President testily made clear, American policy on Formosa had been settled before he saw the supreme commander.

That policy is to let the future status of Formosa be determined by the United Nations. This is a sensible solution, and if this means—as it presumably does—the demilitarization of the Japanese island, then the American interest will be amply protected. This is all that in the days when policy was unclear, General MacArthur was worrying about. The President doubtless took occasion at Wake Island to acquaint General MacArthur with the details of the Formosa decision. But as to the general's loyalty in the matter the President expressed full confidence. If there were such a meeting of minds, then the President might be well advised to go further, and consider extending the scope of General MacArthur's assignment. There is urgent need for the appointment of a high commissioner for the whole Far East more or less after the pattern of the high commissionership in the Near East which was given to Admiral Mark Bristol after the First World War.

Our diplomacy in the Far East is notoriously weak at a time when it should be strong and regionally integrated. There are differences to exploit, diplomatic influence needs to be exerted, and a man in the field is needed who can see and supervise the situation as a geographical whole. No relations exist with Communist China, and there is no early prospect of any; so that we are trying to make our purposes clear to the Chinese Communists through the Indian Ambassador to Peking. This is most unsatisfactory procedure. If General MacArthur were given a broader authority, he is said by the men who know him to be capable of rising both to the occasion and to the responsibility. This feeling seemed to be held by the President as he turned on the divisionists.

Universal Service

In ordering Government agencies concerned with mobilization to draw up proposals for universal training of all American youths, President Truman has taken account of the major manpower problem of the times. How to build up and maintain the three-million-man military establishment which Mr. Truman has set as a goal is causing a good deal of worry both in the Pentagon and in Congress, particularly among members of Senator Lyndon Johnson's Preparedness Subcommittee. Indeed, it is becoming evident that there is no way in which the manpower needs of the military services can be met fairly and the nonmilitary aspects of our national security protected except through a system of universal service—a system, that is, that would recognize the obligation of every young man to serve the common defense for a certain period of time, either in or out of uniform.

Take, for example, the problem of reservists presently called to duty without their consent. Whatever the legalities involved, it will be difficult to sustain their morale when the impetus of the Korean war is over—and this will be especially true in light of the fact that the burden has fallen disproportionately on enlisted men and junior officers. The truth is that most men did not anticipate this sort of limited emergency service when they signed up for the reserves. Their potential disgruntlement bodes ill for the future of the reserves. Moreover, there is the fact that many reservists are key men in science or similar essential occupations and must be deferred. Hence there is more than a little point to Representative Vinson's comment that the reserves as now constituted are not a readily available force.

Beyond this is the problem of the remaining draftable manpower under Selective Service. General Hershey was not speaking entirely gratuitously when he objected to so many deferments, for the simple reason that there is not enough manpower coming of age each year to go around. Take one age group, the 19-year-olders. According to Bureau of Labor Statistics figures recently presented to the American Council on Education, approximately 1,100,000 young men now turn 19 each year. On the basis that half the three-million-man military establishment would be filled with draftees serving two years, 730,000 men would be required annually. But approximately 30 percent of the 1,100,000-man pool is unavailable for physical defects or other reasons. This leaves a pool in the neighborhood of 770,000. Then consider the fact that some 300,000 young men enter college each year (though at a younger age). If even half this number were deferred as scientists and future leaders, it would cut the pool down to 620,000—or 130,000 below requirements.

The time when this pinch will be felt is not far off. Mobilization, of course, is generally a wasteful period, and probably the services could economize on some of their requirements. They could make greater use of women as clerks, drivers and the like, and they could hire older civilians for some of the jobs held by military personnel. Even so, the pinch will be severe, and it will affect not only the services but also the colleges and the professions.

Any universal service law adopted would have to be far different from those considered by Congress in the past. For example, a law so emasculated as to provide for only six months of active training—a concession made in the last universal military training bill—would be next to useless. A satisfactory law would have to encompass both training and later obligatory service, perhaps two years, as part of the regular military establishment plus a mandatory period in the reserves. Moreover, to make it truly universal, the law would have to require national service of those not in uniform—for in true universal service there would be no distinction between service in uniform or out of it. Young men deferred to remain in college would be bound later to serve the Government. The law might specify that service would begin on graduation from high school or at age 17 or 18.

Many highly involved considerations, of course, enter the framing of an adequate law. For example, a procedure would have to be worked out whereby the colleges would not be denuded and the reservoirs of potential scientists and doctors depleted. They are as much a part of security as the military. Furthermore, the training of young men under UMT is like adding to steel capacity—it takes steel to make steel. The armed services would have to judge when they could best spare the men to staff a UMT program. Undeniably also, universal service would contain an element of governmental direction of careers. But the concept of national service is a very old one going back to the roots of the Republic. The needs of the present emergency—the necessity for augmenting our national security—are likely to be with us for a long time. Universal service commends itself to serious thought as the most equitable way to meet those needs.

Helping Yugoslavia

Just how serious is the threat of starvation in Yugoslavia is indicated by the fact that the Export-Import Bank has allowed Tito to use two million dollars to buy food, although such loans are usually restricted to nonconsumption goods. Yugoslavia has experienced an almost total crop failure because of drought—drought that has also affected Hungary and Romania. Official optimism concealed the real situation for some time, but now the Yugoslavs make no bones about their plight. The effect on popular morale may be seen in Marshal Tito's order decreeing equality of rations and ending special privileges. One United States official estimates that it will take 100 million dollars to restore the Yugoslav economy—so severe has been the slaughter of cattle herds and other results of the drought.

That it is in this country's interest to do what it can to help out in the disaster can hardly be questioned. Help need imply no fawning over Tito or approval of his brand of communism. The facts are, however, that Tito has split with and been denounced by the Kremlin, that he has the strongest army in Europe outside Russia, and that it is American policy to encourage every deviation from Stalinist imperialism. Thus aside from the humanitarian aspect, it is good sense to try to sustain Yugoslavia.

The search that has been going on in a good many Administration quarters is for legal means to aid Yugoslavia. There is a provision in the Mutual Defense Assistance Act which, with a little stretching, might well be applicable. That provision permits the President to use up to 10 percent of MDAA funds to give military assistance to "any other European nation whose strategic location makes it of direct importance to the defense of the North Atlantic area..." Certainly Yugoslavia qualifies on security grounds, and while food is not the usual type of military aid, in the present situation it unquestionably is relevant to the ability of Yugoslavia to defend itself against attack. Such an arrangement, moreover, might pave the way for further defense cooperation from Tito.

Even more practicable would be an exchange of American food surpluses for Yugoslav strategic materials. Although Yugoslavia now earns dollars with much of her strategic material production, she might be induced to divert some future production in light of the need—and this would be a sign of her intention to do all she could to help herself. Still another possibility lies in the legislation governing disposal of surpluses under control of the Commodity Credit Corporation. CCC has discretionary authority, for example, over sale of storables such as grain for export, and it might be possible to arrange a sale to Yugoslavia at a token price. In short, there is no lack of ways to help if governmental agencies will cooperate. The important thing is to act quickly, and not let the undisputed need become bogged down in quibbles over bookkeeping.

Case Of Lieut. Gilbert

A Negro Infantry officer, Lieut. Leon A. Gilbert, has recently been convicted of misconduct before the enemy and sentenced to die. This sentence, it seems to me, is unduly harsh under the circumstances.

Historically a decree of the death sentence in cases like Lieutenant Gilbert's is based primarily upon the belief that only the severest punishment possible will minimize the danger of similar misconduct by other soldiers. This notion was undoubtedly sound in the days when the man who did the bulk of the fighting was either an unreliable mercenary or a subject reluctantly performing his obligation to his monarch.

Contrast this situation with that obtaining in the Army in which Lieutenant Gilbert has been serving. The average American soldier realizes in the long run that he is fighting for himself and his people. With this realization and with his self-esteem, born of education and an age that recognizes the worth of every man, he will withstand the most extreme hardship and make the greatest sacrifice rather than let his comrades and country down.

Furthermore, our position in Korea has never been so perilous as to justify making an example of soldiers like Lieutenant Gilbert in order to deter the few other soldiers who might be tempted to fail in their duty.

Was Lieutenant Gilbert's conduct so morally reprehensible that he should pay with his life? I do not think so. His crime was that of disobeying an order in combat. Under considerable stress he was simply guilty of weakness or very bad judgment.

In judging the moral quality of Lieutenant Gilbert's conduct it might be well to think back to other cases involving misconduct by soldiers. I recall the case of the despicable Martin Monti. While a soldier in the United States Army he coolly stole an airplane, flew to Germany and joined the German army. His punishment for this was only a relatively few years in prison. I recall also the case of the American soldier on occupation duty in Japan who several years ago brutally murdered a Japanese couple and raped their daughter. With the help of his Congressman he eventually got off scot-free.

It is true that two wrongs do not make a right. Yet is it fair to ignore the way in which justice has been applied in the past? Should Lieutenant Gilbert die for his weakness under pressure when a cold-blooded traitor gets off with a moderate prison term and a brutal murderer-rapist goes free?

Arlington Schools

I want to vote for the Arlington school bond issue. I have been fighting on the side of better schools for years. I have a youngster going to school from 12:30 to 4:30 because of overcrowded conditions. I am well aware of the argument that "We should not penalize our children because we grown-ups have made such a mess of things." It is a good argument.

There are some serious questions, however. Am I doing the youngsters, especially those who are not yet of school age, any service to vote $7,500,000 to do a job that five million dollars should easily do, and exhaust funds that will be badly needed for future schools? Do I want to put that much money into the hands of a school board which has shown that it has neither the conception to spend money properly, nor the inclination, nor the experience? Do I want to give this school board, by voting for this bond issue, an apparent vote of confidence, when there is no confidence?

I want to vote for the school bond issue. I know that there are thousands of others in the same position as myself. What a terrible choice we will face on November 7. HOWARD R. MASSEY.

Andrew Ellicott

Reference is made to the article in your October 16 issue entitled "Lancaster, Pa., Honors Man It Says Planned Washington." As a descendant of the Ellicott family and the one who unveiled the beautiful bronze plaque, I can call attention to several facts.

No one has questioned the authenticity of the plan being Major L'Enfant's in the beginning, but when an employe quarrels over his compensation and then is relieved of his position, some one else usually carries on the work. In this case it was Andrew Ellicott, who had as an assistant a mulatto, Isaac Banneker, for whom Banneker School is named.

A pamphlet published by the Lancaster County Historical Society earlier this year entitled "Andrew Ellicott, Surveyor of the Capital of Our Nation" is well worth reading and it contains foot notes of historical records from which some of the information is taken.

Your article mentions circles instead of squares. I never have heard that in all I've been told. But as Andrew Ellicott was given the job of carrying on, why should he have not made changes if he saw fit? Later on Andrew Ellicott laid out Buffalo, N. Y., on practically the same lines.

The speakers on the program October 15 were very impressive. They all connected in the line of work Andrew Ellicott did in his day in the State of Pennsylvania. I was the representative of Washington the Capital and of the family. It is too bad your articles did not appear sooner instead of after, when everyone present thought it very fitting and appropriate.

U. N. Flag

Why all the fuss about the display of the United Nations flag with that of the United States? To this day, on special occasions, "Old Glory" waves side by side with the "Stars and Bars" of our former enemy, the Confederate States of America. The only protests I have ever heard were from a few misguided Yankees, most of whom did not even recognize the flag of the Southern States.

There is one point in The Washington Post editorial of October 13 on this question, however, which needs some clarification. You remind the DAR that on January 2, 1776, George Washington raised the flag of the United States alongside those of Virginia and Pennsylvania. It is my impression that what he raised was the flag of the United Colonies, since the United States did not come into existence until six months later, July 4, 1776.

Homewood Dogs

My heart bleeds for those poor people in Alexandria, who have been told to get rid of their dogs or else! I just wish that someone with the proper authority would come out to my town of Homewood, Md. (a part of Kensington) and tell dog owners there to get rid of their dogs or move out!

It is not at all unusual to see a pack of dogs, anywhere from eight to a dozen, running through the streets, through our shrubs and flowers, lying in the streets so that cars have to stop until the dogs feel inclined to move, and messing up our lawns. They bark, growl, yelp, whine, and do all the other things dogs do, during the day and at night. We have been kept awake and have been awakened by the howling of these animals.

Things are so bad that the principal of our local school at a P-TA meeting, had to tell the parents that she would be responsible for their children but would not be responsible for their dogs. It seems that the dogs, as many as 20 or 30, follow the kids to school and there commit the usual nuisances and make the usual noise about which I am complaining. Why dog owners fail to do something about their animals is beyond my comprehension.

Health Insurance And The AMA

The American Medical Association's huge advertising campaign now being conducted in the Nation's press and on the radio impels this letter.

Your readers should not be misled. All doctors do not believe that national health insurance is "one of the most serious threats to individual freedom." We are a group of Washington doctors who believe otherwise. We are ashamed of the unprofessional conduct of the AMA in its fight against this and other social programs needed by the American people. Many of our colleagues feel as we do but will be silent because of the power of the AMA to censor its members.

The work of the AMA Washington lobby in the Eighty-first Congress is illustrative. It was largely responsible for the defeat of three major health bills supported by both Republicans and Democrats. One of these would have improved school health services; one would have encouraged the development of local health departments throughout the country; and the third would have expanded institutions for training doctors, nurses, and other health personnel in short supply. In addition, the AMA helped defeat an extension of the Social Security Act to people permanently and totally disabled.

The AMA has a long record of opposition to health insurance of all kinds. Because of public pressure it now supports voluntary health insurance, but only those types it can control completely. Such insurance is only practicable for hospitalized illness, and for certain groups in the upper income brackets. The AMA steadfastly refuses to help work out a system of health insurance that would cover all medical needs including preventive medicine and would be economically and geographically available to all the people.

The AMA and its allies in the drug and commercial insurance fields are spending 20 million dollars on this advertising campaign. This 20 million dollars could finance a four-year education for 2500 medical students; it could pay for one year's medical care for 160,000 families; it could build 75 200-bed hospitals which could serve a population of three million. Such an expenditure seems hard to justify at a time when the country's resources are at a premium.

We deeply regret that our professional organization has in these ways found it necessary to forsake its customary dignity, its scientific standards, and its devotion to the public good. We sincerely hope that the AMA will act soon to remove this blot from the good name of the medical profession.

Rear Attack On Divorce

By Malvina Lindsay

Treating Sick Families

THE PRESENT rash of hasty marriages growing out of the Korean war and the draft is expected to accelerate divorce rates again. Hence there will be renewed table pounding demands that "something be done" about the breakdown of the family.

Fortunately some realistic, also scientific, steps on a national scale are under way aimed to clear up the confusion growing out of the hodgepodge of State divorce laws, also to prevent the occasion for divorce.

That neither preachment nor sterner laws will halt the rise of divorce has been demonstrated. Jeremiahs have been waging a losing fight on that front for decades, and State Legislatures in the last few years have had an outcropping of tighter divorce laws—all followed by more traffic to Reno or its equivalent.

The new attack aims primarily to strike at the failure of marriage which precedes divorce. And it seeks gradual uniformity of State marriage and divorce laws through the State level rather than by Federal dictum.

Heading the movement is the Interprofessional Commission on Marriage and Divorce Laws, its members being 14 leaders in the fields of law, religion, medicine, psychology, sociology and education. It is indorsed by the American Bar Association, which long has been alarmed over the widespread fraud and deceit connected with divorce court practices.

THIS commission, incorporated at the recent Bar Association in Washington, now with headquarters in New York, has started gathering scientific facts concerning marriage and divorce in this country. According to its chairman, Judge Paul W. Alexander of Toledo, Ohio, it wants first to know the effect present laws have on families in general. It will seek to develop a model uniform act or series of acts on marriage and divorce for State legislation, a project that may require two or three years.

Drawing of the legislation will be done by the National Conference of Commissioners of Uniform State Laws, which recently proposed that all State Legislatures require five days of waiting for a marriage license. A prime mover in this mobilization of law and social science against divorce has been the National Conference on Family Life. The Interprofessional Commission grew out of the Family Life Conference called by President Truman in 1948.

Getting agreement of States on any model law may seem almost as hopeless a task as getting a Federal uniform law passed. But this grassroots approach would at least be educational, and would not meet the opposition of States-Righters. Also, gradually, it is believed, areas of agreement between States on marriage and divorce practices could be evolved, especially since a central organization would be working to that end.

PROBABLY the best effect of the commission will be the impetus it will give the growing movement to treat family ills before they erupt in divorce. Judge Alexander, who has had wide experience in family court work, says that in thousands of divorce cases that have come before him, the marriages had failed, the families been separated, for an average period of two years before the principals came into court.

To prevent this, reform of marriage laws is more necessary than of divorce laws. Also family courts, now doing effective work in many cities, are often a means of salvaging marriages. Education of lawyers to serve as marriage counselors rather than special pleaders or protagonists in court fights also would help.

The legal profession generally is showing concern over the divorce situation. The National Association of Women Lawyers, which is represented on the new commission, is now operating domestic relations clinics in 40 major cities and in 18 foreign countries. These are aimed at preventing family breakups. It is also planning war service clinics in key cities to help war brides of the Korean war. It reports an average of 6 out of every 10 couples referred to its clinics have been reconciled.

All this interest and action bespeaks a new concept of what is called the "divorce ill"—one that recognizes that no lasting good comes from merely punishing an offending spouse, also that families must be helped rather than commanded to stay together. This approach, together with the increasing education for marriage and family life, may yet upset some of the gloomy predictions of divorce statisticians.

Drafting Doctors

"Another mystery of the times" (see letter by A. J. Haskell published October 11), is why the draft age limit on doctors and dentists is 51 years instead of the 26-year age limit for all other citizens. The doctors are the only group in the country "enjoying" this distinction.

Surely there are other highly trained specialists in science, mathematics and so on, whose services may be vitally necessary to our defense program—yet such persons escape service by the 26-year age limit. Why single out the doctors? Why not draft anyone, regardless of age, if the Government feels the need of his special training?

Democrats Serve Talks And Oysters

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

By a Post Reporter

SNOW HILL, Md., Oct. 20.—Maryland Democrats served up four tons of oysters and a double portion of campaign oratory tonight to a rally of 600 persons in this historic 310-year-old town.

The rally marked the highlight of a tour of Worcester County by Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., U. S. Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), and their Democratic running mates.

Republicans were following close behind the Democrats. They will move in to Worcester County Saturday, while the Democrats go on to Wicomico County where the Republicans were campaigning yesterday.

Worcester is traditionally a Democratic stronghold. Four years ago, however, it gave a margin of 132 votes to Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin, against Lane in the governorship race. This time Democrats predict Lane will take the county from McKeldin with the help of J. Millard Tawes, unopposed State comptroller on the Lane ticket, who is a native of the Eastern Shore.

The candidates spoke from the deck of an open flat bed trailer truck. They predicted a Democratic victory and assailed Soviet ideology.

Campaign Funds Asked of Policemen

TOWSON, Md., Oct. 20 (AP).—H. S. Baldwin, Democratic candidate for Baltimore County commissioner, acknowledged today that county police and firemen were being asked to make "voluntary contributions to the campaign fund."

Overshadowed by continuing conflict between advocates of two proposed new forms of government, a campaign is under way in Fairfax County to defeat any governmental change by referendum November 7.

Increasing activity by those favoring the present administration was pointed up yesterday by an appeal to the voters from William J. Barber, vice chairman of the Committee to Retain Representative Government. He urged residents to retain the existing form until the General Assembly can make "needed changes" when it reconvenes in 1952.

In the November election, voters will decide (1) whether the form of government should be changed and (2) if so, whether the county should adopt the county manager or county executive plan. To date, most political activity has centered on the two proposed new forms.

Regardless of what the electorate decides, Barber pointed out, the present form of government will be retained until January, 1952, when a revised administration would become effective. "In that very same month the General Assembly will convene in biennial session to enact such laws as have become necessary since its last meeting."

He suggested that the General Assembly would be willing to approve, as "emergency legislation," any measures which Fairfax County deems necessary to improve its government. "Experience has shown," he said, "that the General Assembly is sympathetic to the needs of local governments and has, from time to time, needed the requests of towns, counties and cties for legislation aiding in modernizing their operations."

A similar viewpoint was expressed Thursday night by State Senator Andrew W. Clarke of Belle Haven, a member of the 21-member study commission which recommended adoption of the county executive form of government last month.

Speaking before more than 100 local precinct workers in Fairfax Courthouse, Clarke said he voted on the commission to indorse the executive form only because he thought it the most satisfactory of the two forms available in the event a change was impending. Neither form, he said, will bring all the improvements needed to remedy the government's ills.

He said his "first preference" was legislation which would permit the county to draft its own charter and set up a form of government best suited to its needs. Because of the changing character of the county, he contended, no "ready made" form of government now in existence is suitable in Fairfax.

As an example, Clarke said he thought the county should have an elected school board. "But," he pointed out, "neither of the proposed new forms would enable the people to select their school board members without special legislation."

Further activity by those favoring the existing government is reflected in sample ballots, distributed this week in the county. They call for a vote "against" any change in government, but favor the county executive form in the event a change is favored by a majority of voters.

Meanwhile, the Fairfax Committee for Good Government yesterday made public a letter from an official in Henrico County, Va., charging that legislation which changed the method of electing supervisors there was "an effort to wreck the manager form."

Mrs. W. H. Ferguson, chairman of the Henrico Board of Supervisors, said the county changed from at-large election of supervisors to district elections because of "sabotage" legislation induced by political opponents of the manager form. She said the move failed because district voting still gave a majority to advocates of manager government.

Omer Hirst, chairman of the Good Government League, said the letter was released to counteract arguments by county executive supporters that at-large election of supervisors was found to be unsatisfactory in Henrico, often cited as an example of good county manager government.

County Schools In Annexation Area Assailed

A description of gloomy school conditions in a 7½-square-mile area Alexandria seeks to annex from Fairfax County was given yesterday by Alexandria's school superintendent, T. C. Williams.

Testifying before a three-judge annexation tribunal at Fairfax Courthouse, Williams told of serious congestion, lack of building space and "makeshift" remedies. He was trying to convince the court that school children of the area will receive greater benefits if the land is ceded to the city.

Among schools singled out by Williams was the Lee-Jackson elementary school, just outside Alexandria on Duke st. extended. There, he said, overcrowding is so bad a teachers' rest room has been utilized as a classroom.

Children of the area attend ten "widely scattered" schools, only two of which are actually in the annexable zone, according to Williams' testimony. He said Negro high school pupils in the area have to travel "at least 20 miles" to attend the Manassas Regional High School.

None of the high schools attended by pupils from the annexable zone is accredited by the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges, Williams testified. He said the association recognizes both of Alexandria's high schools.

Alexandria schools can accommodate all pupils of the disputed area immediately without overcrowding, the school official told the court. In the event of annexation, he said, the city plans to build a 20-room elementary school in the annexable zone and a new high school for white pupils in Alexandria "just inside" the city limits.

C. Luckett Watkins, Alexandria director of public works, described for the court the city's plans for installation of sewage facilities in the disputed territory.

The court recessed until next Tuesday at 10 a. m. Hearing the case are Judges Paul E. Brown of Fairfax, Jeff Walter of Accomac and Walter T. McCarthy of Arlington.

Gillette Will Study Charges Of 'Office Bartering' in N. Y.

DUBUQUE, Iowa, Oct. 20 (AP).—Senator Gillette (D., Iowa) plans to leave for Washington Saturday to look into a complaint by an American Labor Party spokesman that both major parties in New York are "bartering public office like commercial goods."

The complaint was received by Gillette last night in a telegram from Arthur Schutzer, executive secretary of the American Labor Party. He said both Republicans and Democrats engaged in "sordid deals."

Gillette is chairman of the Senate subcommittee on Privileges and Elections.

In New York, Schutzer said the matter quoted by Gillette was from a petition Schutzer sent the Senator on behalf of John T. McManus, ALP candidate for Governor of New York.

Schutzer's telegram said the evidence is "clear" that Joe R. Hanley, New York lieutenant governor, was induced to surrender nomination for Governor to run for the Senate "on promise of financial help."

Schutzer also said the recent nomination of former Mayor William O'Dwyer as United States Ambassador to Mexico was "engineered by Democratic Boss Edward) Flynn and (President) Truman to yank O'Dwyer out of the picture of graft and corruption that is now coming to light."

This apparently referred to the recent uncovering by a Brooklyn grand jury of a giant gambling ring and million-dollar "payoff" to some New York policemen.

the report showed, and only six persons for gambling misdemeanors.

Number Seven Precinct is reportedly the headquarters of Emmitt Warring, alleged czar of Washington gambling.

When the committee learned that only one gambling arrest had been made in Number Seven and Number Three Precincts during fiscal 1949, hearings were held that rocked the police department.

Capt. Anthony Richitt, then commanding Number Three, testified that Waring had referred to Major Barrett as "the Boss" and had told Richitt that "the Boss" was worried about the committee's interest in the lack of gambling arrests in Number Three. Richitt said Warring offered him a bribe.

Barrett denied Richitt's charges and transferred him to Number Eight Precinct. Capt. Beverly Beach of Number Seven Precinct admitted that he had talked to Warring about gambling in Number Seven, but only to find out if Warring was active. He said his precinct was free of organized gambling.

Gambling arrests zoomed during fiscal 1950 in Number Three Precinct, however, with 14 arrests for gambling felonies, and 26 for gambling misdemeanors. No felony arrests, and only one misdemeanor arrest were reported for the previous year.

The value of property stolen during fiscal 1950 decreased from $2,011,340 to $1,744,162.

But the percentage of property recovered also decreased from 41.8 percent to 40.7.

Henry L. Stimson Dies at 83; Served Four Presidents

ing his book, "On Active Service." The book summed up his strong conviction that good will will triumph among men and nations.

Born in New York in 1867 to parents whose forebears were New England patriots in George Washington's day, Mr. Stimson was educated at Yale University and the Harvard Law School. He gave up a private law practice which paid him $25,000 a year to become a United States Attorney under President Theodore Roosevelt, won prominence in that job by convicting five railroads on charges of giving rebates to the so-called "sugar trust," then ran for Governor of New York in 1910 and lost.

Recalled in 1940

He was Secretary of War from 1911 to 1913 under President Taft, Secretary of State in the Hoover cabinet from 1929 to 1933, then retired when the Democratic Roosevelt regime came to office.

In 1940 when President Roosevelt recalled the Republican statesman as Secretary of War to build the country's 200,000-man army into the world's mightiest force of 8,500,000 men, he was maligned by Republicans for accepting a New Deal cabinet post. He took the criticism in stride.

Long a preacher of preparedness, the aging Mr. Stimson set about directing expenditure of more than half the 350 billion dollars which the United States spent in World War II. From the beginning of the project which produced the atomic bomb Stimson was a key atomic policy maker. From May 1, 1943, until he resigned, he was directly responsible to the President for the entire undertaking.

In February, 1947, Mr. Stimson said that his chief purpose in recommending use of the atom bomb against Japan "was to end the war in victory with the least possible cost in the lives of men in the armies which I had helped to raise."

"... I believe that no man ... holding in his hands a weapon of such possibilities for accomplishing this purpose and saving those lives, could have failed to use it and afterwards looked his countrymen in the face."

When Mr. Stimson retired in 1945 he received from President Truman the Distinguished Service Medal and the "thanks of the Nation."

"The Nation and the world are familiar with the inadequacy of our Army when you went back to the Department of War a little more than five years ago," President Truman said. "Under your administration it reached the greatest strength in history and became the best trained and best equipped army in the world."

The President told the retiring secretary that it was "difficult to estimate the value of the long public service in which you have attained high eminence in such diverse fields of activity."

When a Senate committee was considering his nomination for secretary and he was being questioned about some of the statements he made as a private citizen, Stimson remarked icily: "If you go on reading from my past statements you'll make me feel like Winston Churchill for having been right so often."

Four days after Pearl Harbor, when the country was still stunned by American losses there, Mr. Stimson held his first war time news conference, he said: "It's the last shots, and not the first shots, that count."

On September 19, 1945, at his last news conference before leaving office, Mr. Stimson was asked about his future plans. He replied: "Just at the present moment my horizon is limited to getting to my little home on Long Island and spending a long period in resting up and having a good time. After that, we'll see what the Lord has in store for me."

Resigned 2 Days Later

His resignation became effective two days later. Stimson suffered a heart attack the following month and was confined to bed at his home.

At his final news conference as Secretary of War, Mr. Stimson said the United States was then "not only at the peak of it's military strength," but had "attained an influence and leadership among all nations that are unprecedented" and added:

"Now that we have arrived at that position we must make sure that we can serve it and use it in the cause of justice and peace throughout the world." He cautioned that if war should come again, "it would be awful in its sudden intensity and we must never again allow ourselves to be caught in a state of complete unreadiness."

Despite his years, Mr. Stimson was unusually active as Secretary. Associates spoke of him as "running" from his desk into the adjoining office to talk with General of the Army George C. Marshall, the Chief of Staff, and of "jumping" into a jeep on a prolonged inspection tour.

He made several trips abroad during the war years. In the summer of 1943 he spent three weeks on an aerial tour of Iceland, Britain and North Africa to see at first hand how American troops were faring overseas. Shortly after D-Day in 1944 he visited the combat areas in Normandy. In the summer of 1945 he went with President Truman to the "Big Three" conference at Potsdam.

Usually dignified in speech as well as manner, Mr. Stimson sometimes startled newsmen with unexpected statements, such as this reply he once gave when asked a question: "I have a mouthful to say about that."

Upon his return from the 1943 trip to England and North Africa, he got on obvious kick out of telling this story:

"When I dismounted from my airplane in Newfoundland, I saw a number of young second lieutenants on the field whose faces fell. On inquiry I found there had been a rumor Hedy Lamarr was coming on that plane."

Finland's Polytech Chorus Is Heard in Fine Recital

By Paul Hume

For two nights running, musical visitors from Europe have been showing us how to handle "The Star-Spangled Banner."

First it was Sir Thomas Beecham and the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra. Last night it was the Polytech Chorus of Finland. It was obvious that no one ever told these virile young singers that our national anthem was hard to sing. They stood up and sang it in absolutely clear English, in harmony, and in a higher key than we usuallly try it.

Ossi Elokas conducted the 55 men who won for him and his countrymen an increasingly warm reception from the audience. All the music was by Finnish composers, led by the greatest of them all, Jan Sibelius.

While the program book accurately describes Finnish music as of "prevailing somber character," the handsome chorus found ways to enliven and vary their offering. All three of the soloists who added notable tones to the evening were deservedly encored. So, as one would expect, was the excerpt from Finlandia, and a haunting piece known in this country as "Vale of Tuoni."

Loveliest of all the songs that had to be repeated was a lullaby by Palmgren, whose text said the singer learned it as a child resting in a crib in his father's house.

All evening the tone of the chorus was of unusual strength, even in the quietest moments. It has not been polished in imitation of any symphonic group, but is allowed to speak freely with the natural luster of fine men's voices.

We are fortunate in Washington that so many gifted visitors from other countries are eager to come and sing and play for us. What a day it will be when we can match their expectation both in our cultural attainments and in the place we receive them.

22,000 in Finland Ignore Reds, End Strike

HELSINKI, Oct. 20 (U.P.).—Finland's 22,000 woodworkers ignored Communist appeals to continue their strike and went back to their jobs today.

Other workers in small unions also returned to work and 83,000 metal workers were to vote this weekend whether to accept compromise pay raises agreed to by the Socialist-controlled Federation of Labor.

U. S. Leaders Mourn Death Of Stimson

From Press Dispatches

The death of Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State and of War, was mourned by prominent citizens last night as the passing of a "great American."

At Hartford, Conn., Vice President Alben W. Barkley said "I am deeply grieved at the passing of that great American and great statesman."

Barkley said Stimson served "in many capacities and added dignity and character to public life. His passing is a great loss to the American people."

In Washington, Secretary of Defense Marshall said:

"He was a great American, a model citizen. I found him a tower of strength throughout the war. He shone with the highest integrity in his every purpose. I feel that I have lost a very dear friend."

Secretary of State Acheson said:

"One of Mr. Stimson's favorite quotations was from the Book of Kings: 'Let not him that buckleth on his armor boast himself as he that putteth it off.'

"Mr. Stimson has put off his armor. He has served his country through a long life with the depth, the simplicity, the austerity of devotion of General Washington. Those who love and serve this Republic will find in his memory an ever-present help in time of trouble."

Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., Mex.), who served as Secretary of Agriculture for a while when Stimson was in the Cabinet, said:

"I thought he was a wonderfully fine man. He was a very great and distinguished American."

Senator Johnson (D., Colo.), said: "Mr. Stimson was a man of great courage and ability. He had a very fine record."

Secretary of the Army Frank A. Pace, jr., said:

"Our country has lost one of its finest citizens with the death of Henry L. Stimson. His extraordinary ability and brilliant leadership through two terms of service embracing both peace and war made him a Secretary of War without peer and one on whom his successors will endeavor to pattern their service to their country and to the Department of the Army."

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff:

"The death of our wartime Secretary of War has taken another devoted and unselfish soldier from the ranks. Mr. Stimson's passing will be mourned by the Nation and especially by the Americans who fought on battlefields across the world under his courageous leadership. On behalf of the armed forces may I offer to his family our condolences and to a great civilian soldier our salute.

Gen J. Lawton Collins, Chief of Staff, United States Army:

"I had the great privilege of serving in the War Department for a brief period while Mr. Stimson was our great Secretary of War, and I know the inspiration we all derived from his leadership. The Army has lost one of its greatest wartime secretaries and one of its lasting friends."

Thomas K. Finletter, Secretary of the Air Force, said:

"It was with deep regret that I learned of the death of Mr. Stimson. He was a man who gave his utmost to the welfare of America and the world. In his passing we have lost one of our truly great citizens."

Dairy Charges 'Pressure' Won Milk Ruling

A spokesman for Wakefield Model Farms Dairy yesterday charged the District Commissioners and its Health Department with being "pressured" into reinvoking the ban on imported milk.

Wakefield and Embassy dairies, sole distributors of milk not inspected locally, have urged that the ban not begin until next June. The Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which now supplies more than 80 percent of the city's supply, is on the opposite side of the milk argument, favoring a closed market.

The ban goes into effect October 31.

Yesterday John F. Hillyard, attorney for Wakefield, said the Commissioners' action would "force distributors, whether they like it or not," to purchase milk from the milk producers association.

"For the past 20 years," said Hillyard, "this association, through political pressure, has been able to dominate and control the Commissioners and the Health Department."

The attorney also charged Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, District director of public health, with reversing himself on the milk issue "under great pressure from above."

Health Department inspectors also seem to be "dominated" by the milk producers' association, Hillyard further charged.

He took issue with Seckinger's earlier statement that only five of the dairy farms selling to the independent dairies qualified to sell milk here. More than 200 producers in the Cumberland area scored more than enough points needed to obtain a District permit, Hillyard contended.

Bro. Patrick Culhame Dies in West Park, N. Y.

WEST PARK, N. Y., Oct. 20 (AP). The Rev. Brother Patrick J. Culhame, 82, former president of St. Mary's College, Halifax, Nova Scotia, and provincial Americus of the American Province of the Congregation of Christian Brothers of Ireland, died today at Santa Maria Novitiate.

Edward Kelly, Former Mayor Of Chicago, Dies at 74

CHICAGO, Oct. 20 (AP)—Edward J. Kelly, 74, Democratic political boss and former mayor of Chicago, died today.

Mr. Kelly

The tall, red-haired civil engineer, who helped the late Franklin D. Roosevelt make third-term presidential history, collapsed suddenly and died of heart disease in a doctor's office.

He had gone there for a periodic checkup and had just told the doctor: "I never felt better in my life."

Mr. Kelly was Democratic national committeeman from Illinois and the brains of the old Kelly-Nash Chicago machine—one that used to grind out half a million votes for any man "Big Ed" okayed.

Mayor 14 Years

He was mayor of Chicago from 1933 to 1947, a 14-year stretch unmatched by any other head of the Nation's second largest city.

He was an audacious political master who rarely made a bad guess. His friends said he was so smart he even knew when to quit.

In 1946 he did that. When they told him he couldn't win a fifth term and he might take the whole ticket down to defeat with him, he retired and helped elect Democratic Mayor Martin H. Kennelly.

But he remained active in politics. He helped quash an Illinois anti-Truman revolt and helped President Truman win nomination at Philadelphia in 1948.

Survivors include his wife, Margaret E. Kirk Kelly, and three adopted children, Joseph, Patricia and Stephen.

Mr. Kelly was the eldest of nine children of a fireman. He had little formal education but became an engineer and builder and was honored with a doctor of laws degree.

He was chosen mayor in 1933. The city council named him to succeed Mayor Anton J. Cermak, assassinated in Florida.

In 1935 he was elected mayor by a record plurality of 631,000 votes. He was reelected in 1939, defeating Republican former Gov. Dwight H. Green, and in 1943.

Probably his master stroke as a politician was on behalf of Mr. Roosevelt in 1940, when the Nation was a turmoil over third-term suggestions.

Mr. Kelly entered Roosevelt's name in the Illinois presidential primary—and advisory vote—and signaled his machine. Roosevelt swept the state.

Later, at the national convention in Chicago, the "We Want Roosevelt" chant of the so-called "voice from the sewer" led to the third - term nomination. The "voice" helped stampede convention votes. FDR's foes said Mr. Kelly did it.

Publishers Term Newsprint Price Boost Unjustified

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP)—A spokesman for United States newspaper publishers said today $10-a-ton price increases by two Canadian newsprint producers were "precipitate, excessive, unwarranted and ill-timed."

Cranston Williams, general manager of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, said "there is a limit to the amount of money a newspaper can pay out and stay in business."

The statement was issued as it appeared the $10 increase might become general, which would add approximately fifty-nine million dollars to the cost of publishing newspapers in the United States.

Williams said he hoped each manufacturer would analyze his own situation individually and conclude that an increase is not necessary.

Powell River Co. at Vancouver, B. C., started the ball rolling last Friday. Abitibi Power & Paper Co. followed suit at Toronto Tuesday.

Canadian mills supply more than 80 percent of the newsprint used by United States publishers.

Couple Denies Enslavement Of Ward, 41

BALTIMORE, Oct. 20 (AP).—"Utterly false and untrue," a Baltimore couple said today of charges that they kept a former mental institution patient in virtual slavery for more than 12 years.

The allegations were made in a $125,000 damage suit yesterday by Mrs. Elsie T. Jensen, 41, a former patient at the State's Rosewood Training School for feebleminded children.

The defendants are Mr. and Mrs. Philip Weinberg, formerly of Blackstone, Va., and now living here. Weinberg issued this statement:

"The plaintiff in this case has not been with us for three years. Some time ago a demand was made upon us for money. It was indignantly refused.

"I now notice that the sum demanded has been upped a hundredfold. I have placed the matter in the hands of my attorneys. The allegations are utterly false and untrue."

Dr. Kenneth Jones, superintendent at Rosewood when Mrs. Jensen was paroled to the Weinbergs in 1935, said he knows the Weinberg family "and cannot conceive of them doing such things."

Dr. Jones said Mrs. Jensen was released from the institution under its regular procedure. This includes a study by a social worker of the home in which a parolee is to live.

"We considered them to be high class people," Dr. Jones said.

(Mrs. Jensen was 26 in 1935, but due to crowded conditions in State mental institutions, many Rosewood inmates were kept there through adulthood.)

Mrs. Jensen charged in her suit that she was made to work seven days a week for more than 12 years without a penny of pay. The Weinbergs treated her as a drudge and a slave, she charged. They beat her. They censored her mail, incoming and outgoing.

Winless Navy Goes Against USC Today

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

BALTIMORE, Oct. 20.—Navy's football task force, still seeking its first victory of the year, will join battle tomorrow with a similarly minded Southern California U. team which rates a 7½-point favorite.

Jeff Cravath

Coach Jess Cravath had his Trojans on the practice field in Municipal Stadium within a few hours after they deplaned today. Navy's final practice extended into the night at Annapolis where Coach Eddie Erdelatz worked the Middies under the lights after his players had been discharged from classes.

A crowd of 25,000 is expected to view the contest, which marks the first appearance of a Southern California team on an Eastern gridiron. The Trojans beat Navy on the Coast last year, 42-20.

Beaten by Iowa, tied by Washington State, and loser to California by 13-7, Southern Cal has missed its pre-season rating as a Coast Conference powerhouse, but has shown improvement in every game. Coach Cravath makes the admission that "we are loaded with backs," but he has not been pleased with his weighty line.

Navy has been preparing all week with new defenses to meet the Trojan attack that features seven different formations, including the variations of the doublewing and the T.

Frank Gifford, their passing quarterback, will be supported by a hard-driving trio of ball carriers in Ralph Pucci, Bill Bowers and Al Carmichael. The last-named, a 190-pound sophomore, "is potentially the finest back in Southern Cal history," declared Cravath.

Navy has been harrassed since the start of the season by a flock of injuries, and will go into tomorrow's game minus their pair of first-string ends, Tom Bakke and Bob MacDonald.

Indications at Annapolis all week have been that Navy will have little traffic with the big Trojan line that outweighs their own forward 14 pounds to the man, and will rely chiefly on the passing arm of Bob Zastrow. Injuries to Halfback Vic Vine and Art Sundry have further complicated Navy's running game.

Beaten in succession by Maryland, Northwestern and Princeton, the Middies reportedly are fired-up for tomorrow's contest.

They won't lack for vocal support. The brigade of 3700 Midshipmen will leave Annapolis for the game in 88 buses tomorrow morning, and occupy seats in the west stands. They will parade onto the field at 1:05 p. m., instead of the customary 1:15 hour at Baltimore games.

Mattingly Tosses One Touchdown, Scores One

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—After trying unsuccessfully three times, Georgetown finally won its first game of the season—the hard way.

Twice the Hoyas came from behind to batter stubborn Boston College to a convincing 20-10 defeat here tonight before 14,548 thoroughly chilled Braves Field fans.

Georgetown was sparked by a spectacular running show put on by Soph Dick Doyle, a Boston boy, an inspirational defensive performance by Capt. Tommy Hardiman, and a couple of payoff pitches thrown in by Passer Frank Mattingly, one that went for a touchdown and another that set up one he scored.

STATISTICS
Boston College	Georgetown
9 First downs	17
159 Net yards rushing	196
39 Net yards passing	102
14 Passes attempted	17
3 Passes completed	6
1 Passes intercepted	5
8 Number of punts	4
36 Average distance punts	40
1 Fumbles lost	3
25 Yards penalized	65

Hardiman, a ballhawk with few, if any, superiors in his safetyman position, intercepted four passes—three in the space of two minutes in the fourth period. He took the first on a 43-yard touchdown journey in the second period.

His most dazzling performance came when he went 65 yards to the B. C. 15 with his third interception.

Fiery Doyle ran the B. C. ends like he owned them. The fleet 180-pounder gained an even 100 yards in 17 tries. Payoff is that his father is a B. C. graduate, Frederick Doyle, assistant district attorney of Suffolk County.

Fumbles and missed passes marked the early part of the game for Georgetown. Some of it may have been due to the chill Boston weather.

The first fumble set up a B. C. field goal. Jack O'Mahoney, Pittsburgh soph, dropped a punt return when hit and End Mike Roarke recovered for B. C. on the Georgetown 13.

The Hoyas held but on fourth down, Fullback Ed Petela kicked a neat field goal from the 17-yard line.

Georgetown came right back to threaten, mainly on the strength of a 37-yard pass from Mattingly to End Gus Fornaciari to the B. C. 19. Gus was great on this one, wrestling it away from two Eagle defenders. But Bugs Thompson fumbled on the next play and B. C. took over.

Again Georgetown moved well, with Gino Paglucia and that boy Doyle eating up the yards. Doyle's contribution was a nifty 13-yard dash. With the ball on the Eagle 38 and fourth and three, Mattingly went for the first down.

It failed, but Georgetown scored anyway, thanks to Hardiman. Soph Quarterback John McKinnan threw a pass that was deflected into the alert Hardiman's hands. Tommy was coming around at full speed and swept 43 yards down the sidelines, eluding the only man who stood in his path.

B. C. immediately matched the touchdown to walk off at half with a 10-7 lead.

Doyle gave no sign of slowing up after intermission. He made a

Mt. Vernon Routed, 27-0 By GW High

Before 10,000 spectators, George Washington High defeated Mount Vernon, 27-0, last night in the GW High Stadium at Alexandria.

The Presidents' lopsided victory broke a five-game Mount Vernon winning streak. The triumph was GW's fourth against only one defeat.

The victory also gave the Presidents the lead in the Northern Virginia High School League. G.W. is undefeated in two league games, while the Majors have split even in two decisions.

Completely outplaying the Majors, the Presidents scored once in the first quarter, twice in the second and again in the third period.

Halfback Dick Pope scored twice for the victors while Ferdie Thompson and George Nolan also contributed touchdowns. Tubby Dixon converted three times.

Passer Mooney Leads N. C. State's Invasion

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

BEFORE 25,000 Homecoming Day celebrants, Maryland is expected to boot home its fourth straight football winner today at the expense of North Carolina State in Byrd Stadium.

It starts at 2 p. m. with a cloudy, cool day—temperatures in the mid-sixties—predicted.

Bob Ward

The visiting Wolfpack provides Maryland with its first Southern Conference test of the season. Last year the Terps won all four league games, including a narrow 14-6 margin over State, always tough for the Old Liners.

Maryland, ranked eighth nationally, is a three touchdown choice to defeat a State team which has beaten only little Catawba in four tries. While the Terps were racking up Michigan State, Navy and Georgetown and bowing to Georgia, State was losing to Duke, North Carolina and unbeaten Clemson.

Regardless of the close ball games State has managed to play Maryland in the nine-game history of the series, this observer picks it Maryland 27, N. C. State 0.

The passing of Ed Mooney, 165-pound senior tailback, seems to be State's only threat. It appears hardly enough to bring the visitors an upset victory.

Maryland can match the threat of Mooney's passing game with Quarterback Jack (the Jumper) Scarbath, the Conference's sophomore of the week for the past two weeks.

Defensively, Maryland won't be up to snuff against State. Lynn Davis, junior halfback from Baltimore, is definitely out with a fractured shoulder and Halfback Johnny Idzik, mainstay of the Terps' defensive backfield, is also nursing a shoulder injury. But he'll play.

Offensively, however, the Terps are in better shape than at any time since their 34-7 victory over Michigan State two weeks ago. Halfback Mighty Mo Modzelewski, who sat out last week's close call against Georgetown with a bruised knee, is back in harness.

Guard Bobby Ward, the Terps' red-hot candidate for All-America, heads the strong Maryland defensive line which will also include Tackle Ray Krouse for the first time in three weeks. Krouse missed the Michigan State victory

Tech Romps, 25-0, Nears Division Title

By Bill Gilbert

McKinley Tech's Trainers took a long stride toward the Interhigh League Group II championship by defeating Western, 25-0, yesterday at Tech. John Wege led the way by passing for a touchdown and scoring twice.

The Trainers, with two victories and a tie, have only to defeat weak Bell and Roosevelt to clinch their Group crown. Coolidge, Tech's closest rival, has won one game and lost one and must play powerful Eastern.

For Western, a Group I team, it was the first league loss after victories over Wilson and Chamberlain.

Tech's first touchdown came midway in the first quarter on a drive of 76 yards. Halfback Wege passed to End Joe Rice for 30 yards and the score. Rice took the pass on the 20, was hit, shook off the would-be tackler and sped across. Bryant Hopkins placement was blocked.

McKinley scored again late in the second period when Tackle Conway Perkins recovered a fumble by Western's Tommy Turco and lumbered 21 yards to the end zone. Hopkins converted.

The Trainers scored again in the next quarter on a 71-yard march. Wege plowed through right guard for four yards and six points. Hopkins missed again on his try for the extra point.

Tech made it 25-0 with seconds left in the same period. Tackle Dick Dyer hit Western Quarterback Arnold Scribner when Scribner was fading back to pass from

Catholic Plays Hopkins in Homecoming

Catholic University highlights its homecoming weekend this afternoon with a 2:30 Mason-Dixon Conference game against Johns Hopkins at Brookland Bowl.

The Cardinals have beaten Bridgewater and lost to Randolph-Macon. Hopkins whipped Susquehanna and lost to Franklin and Marshall and Hampden-Sydney.

C. U. is still looking for its first win in its three-game series with the Baltimore school.

The Cards scrimmaged Montgomery Junior College yesterday, and Bucky Ennis looked particularly good, catching a touchdown pass and returning a punt 55 yards.

An added feature will be a cross-country race at halftime between C. U. and the Baltimore Olympic Club. C. U. outran Gallaudet, 19 to 14, in its first race last week.

Colonials 20-Point Underdogs

GW Battles Road Jinx At Wake Forest Today

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

WAKE FOREST, N. C., Oct. 20.—George Washington's Colonials will tackle tough, unbeaten Wake Forest and their away-from-home jinx here tomorrow at 2 o'clock.

The Colonials have won only two out of nine road games in three seasons under Bo Rowland, and they're picked to lose again by more than two touchdowns.

If they do, the Colonials will drop out of a three-way tie for the Southern Conference lead with the Deacons and Washington and Lee. W. & L. is heavy favorite to beat Davidson.

Each of the three teams has won three straight in the conference. Both GW. and Wake Forest had rough going in their opening games, the Colonials losing to Virginia and the Deacs being tied by Boston College.

It's strange, the inability of GW. to win on the road. GW.s' only two road victories were over Virginia Tech.

The Colonials started losing on the road in Rowland's first game as coach in 1948. Coincidentally, it was against Wake Forest, 27-13. That was also the first game that Andy Davis took over as the Colonial's No. 1 offensive threat. He passed for a touchdown and gained 109 yards that day.

Davis and Bob Cilento, who have lifted the Colonials into fourth place in passing among the Nation's team, will be in there pitching again at Ends Bill Szanyi, Charlie Butler and Charlie Jones.

It isn't likely that they'll try to run much on a husky Wake Forest line that ranks second in the Nation in rushing defense, and fifth in total defense.

The Deacs, who strike from Peahead Walker's T formation, have a strong offense too. They ran up 47 points against William and Mary, and cracked North Carolina's good defense twice in a 13-7 victory.

Sommers Hot; Wilson Rings Bell, 47 to 0

Mike Sommers scored two touchdowns on runs of 43 and 21 yards and passed to another as Wilson's Green Tigers outclassed Bell Vocational 47-0 in an Interhigh League game yesterday at Wilson.

Sommers scored his two touchdowns in Wilson's 27-point first quarter. Other scores in that period were by George Waring on a 47-yard return of an intercepted pass and a 35-yard end run by Bob Scheele.

Bob Quinn plunged over from two yards out in the next period after Sommer set up the tally with a 36-yard punt return.

Sommer passed to Henry Berliner for 45 yards and Wilson's sixth touchdown in the third quarter. Fred Fishback skirted end for 13 yards and the Tigers' final six points in the last period.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20 (AP).—Roland La Starza of New York punched Duilio Spagnolo all over the ring tonight and gained a 10-round decision over the Italian heavyweight at St. Nicholas Arena. La Starza, a 1 to 4 choice outweighed his foe, 190½ to 184.

Ebert Leads W-L, 25 to 0

Washington-Lee High of Arlington, nursing a 6-0 lead, scored twice in the last 40 seconds of the third period and defeated Eastern High, 25-0, last night at Arlington.

It was the first defeat in six starts for Eastern and gave W-L its third triumph in five games.

Sam Ebert capped a 25-yard drive scoring W-L's second touchdown with 40 seconds remaining in the third quarter. On the next kickoff, Ebert recovered an Eastern fumble on the Ramblers' 11-yard line. On the next play, Al Martina crashed over. Ebert kicked the conversion and W-L led, 19-0.

Martina also scored the first touchdown in the second quarter on a 19-yard jaunt around end. Ebert dashed 51 yards late in the final quarter for the Little Generals' last touchdown.

Blaik Receives Unkindest Cut Of All—From Davis

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 20 (AP). Los Angeles Rams' star, Glenn Davis, who was Coach Earl Blaik's most famous player at West Point, took polite issue with him today in the college-professional grid argument.

"I have a sincere respect for Colonel Blaik, speaking entirely from my own personal experience.

"However, I have found pro football to be a much more demanding sport than the college game."

"In pro ball," Mr. Outside continued, "you meet a great team composed of 33 great players each week. Since the pros take the cream of the crop each year from the college ranks, it is only natural to find much better teams in pro ball."

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 20 (AP).—The University of Miami's undefeated Hurricanes smothered Boston University's Terriers, 34 to 7, tonight in the Orange Bowl before 40,119 fans.

The passing combination of little Jack Hackett and Frank Smith was too much for the visitors. Smith scored three of Miami's five touchdowns—four of which came in the first half.

Boston's score came in the last 30 seconds of play. John Kastan clicked with two passes to Bob Capuano for the touchdown. Miami scored in the first minute and 40 seconds and it wasn't until the second period that Boston reached Miami territory.

Bill Bennings Says:

DEAR FOLKS: AT LAUREL

Apprentice Augustino Catalano, leading rider here, has a nickname that is likely to stick. His friends as well as the fans are dubbing him "The Cat." Rigan McKinney, a director of the track, was pleased when F. D. Adams put up a great ride to win the steeplechase with Banner Waves, owned and trained by the former polo and saddle star, who won the Chevy Chase Steeplechase Handicap three times. The movies taken of each race here are expensive but are worth their while in helping the stewards come to decisions on fouls. Favorite winners are battling for a low average so far. By the way, despite the off betting, the crowds are holding up nicely. The Labrot Stable, which will not take part in winter racing this year, has sold the contract on Apprentice Tommy Lyon to Trainer A. F. East who will take the boy to Florida. See you at the rail—BILL.

Magnet Pulls To Victory At Laurel

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

LAUREL, Oct. 20.—For about half of the 1 minute and 12 seconds of today's feature race it appeared that the favorite players might have stuck out their necks on the Pelican Stable's Magnet. However, the 4-year-old finally got in high gear and won the Security Purse by three lengths.

Magnet, one of the busiest top flight sprinters in the country having started 24 times despite being on the shelf after an injury in Delaware Park's Valley Forge handicap, led R. E. Carter's Oriole and Cedar Farm's Sonofun home in the field of six.

In accounting for his eighth victory of the year, Magnet was capably handled by Jockey Eddie Campbell and returned a $4.60 win mutuel to his legion of backers in a crowd of 7685.

Apprehension among Magnet's backers was caused by the fleet early running of Sonofun. The Grand Time gelding took the lead at the break and was winging along in front of Magnet at the far turn. However, when Campbell went to work on the choice, Magnet responded and disposed of Sonofun.

Oriole, well played, was a trailer early in the test. Jockey Peter McLean roused the son of Swing and Sway in the early stretch in the final drive, Oriole passed Sonofun and was closing in on Magnet.

The day's steeplechase proved a thriller with Rokeby Stable's Genancoke being the winner by a neck margin from Montpelier's Hampton Roads. Courtney Burton's Lock and Key was third in the group of six.

Isadore Bieber's Semper Eade, coupled with Genacoke in the betting and a reason for the entry being the favorite, lost Jockey Bobby McDonald at the last fence, the boy flying through the air in spectacular fashion. He was uninjured.

The accident brought slight interference of Hampton Roads, which was closing boldly and many believed with clear sailing the son of Annapolis would have been the winner.

The winning entry, saddled by Trainer Jack Skinner, paid $3.60.

Jockey Musser Set Down at Laurel

LAUREL, Oct. 20.—Jockey Robert Musser was suspended for the remainder of the meeting by order of the stewards for carrying Polly's Delay wide in yesterday's seventh race. Musser's mount, Remberance, was disqualified after winning at 37-1. Musser, a Detroit boy who survived serious wounds in World War II, will be grounded for nine racing days.

Double Brandy Top-Weighted

LAUREL, Oct. 20.—C. E. Tuttle's Double Brandy, under an assignment of 118 pounds, heads a field of eight horses tomorrow in the thirty-seventh running of the mile-and-a-quarter Washington Handicap, worth $15,000 added.

Arrayed against the Tuttle color-bearer, winner of the Southern Maryland Handicap at Bowie a week ago, will be Brookmeade Stable's Dart by 115, and Blue Hills, 110; F. A. Bonsal's Pilaster, Louis G. Shaw's Abstract, 107; Grandview Stable's Pellicle, 107; Frederico de La Madriz's Hypocrite II, 106, and Mrs. S. J. Vollmer's In First, 104.

Tomorrow's crowd probably will place the bulk of its support three ways in the Washington, with Double Brandy, Pilaster and the Brookmeade entry all seeming certain of strong support.

Double Brandy also won the Omnibus and Brandywine Handicaps earlier in the year and has been in the money in four other stakes.

his own 11-yard line. Scribner fumbled the ball and Dyer recovered for Tech on the Red Raiders' one. Wege went through the middle for the score on the next play. Jim Owens' try for the conversion was low.

The Western offense from the T formation didn't get rolling until late in the game. Behind, 25-0, Teddy Dayharsh took over the quarterbacking role from Scribner and piloted a Western drive that carried to the Tech 11.

On third down, with five yards needed for a first down, Dayharsh was thrown back to the 20 as the whistle blew, ending the game.

Howard Plays Smith Today

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 20.—Coach Eddie Jackson of Howard University faces tomorrow's game with Johnson C. Smith University without the services of seven of his squad, but Howard is still a seven-point favorite.

End Hillary Thompson, co-captain of the team, and an Intercollegiate Athletic All-Conference player last year, was drafted into the Army Wednesday.

Defensive tackles John Carter and John Woods are both out with injuries, as are Quarterback Ernie Davis, End Hank Carrington and Tackle Julius Jackson. To make Coach Jackson's woes complete, his best punter, Eddie Jackson, turned in his uniform Tuesday.

Miss Berg dispatched Alice Bauer of Midland, Texas, three and two. The Minneapolis lass was two under par when the match ended. The championship will be decided in a 36-hole match tomorrow.

Capital Classic Listed Tonight

West Virginia State's hopes for an upset over Morgan State in the National football classic tonight at Griffith Stadium will rest mainly on three Washington boys.

Jack Taylor from Dunbar, Oliver (Bubba) Ellis, Parker-Gray of Alexandria, and Walter Hightower, Armstrong Tech, lead the West Virginia team that went through 18 games without a defeat until losing, 13-2, to Tennessee last week.

Taylor, former halfback on the West Virginia squad, has been shifted to quarterback. Taylor will be passing to Ellis, anotner triple-threat halfback, and Hightower, 6-foot 3-inch end, who also excels on defense.

Morgan State, victor in its last 14 games, has a scoring punch built around the passing of Tim Howard, 190-pound quarterback.

The National Football Classic parade, sponsored by the 16 colleges and universities of the Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association, will be held at 3 p. m. on U st. nw.

key run of 20 yards to the B. C. 39 to set up the touchdown that put Georgetown in comple command.

Mattingly and Gus Fornaciari teamed up for the rest of the yardage. Mattingly threw a long pass that Gus grabbed nicely on the B. C. one. Mattingly, 6-foot-4 stringbean, did the honors on a quarterback sneak.

In the fourth quarter, Doyle went 19 yards around end to the B. C. three for a first down. This time the B. C. line held, stopping four thrusts.

Again Georgetown rushed goalward and this time couldn't be denied. Hardiman made a nice return of the B. C. punt out of danger, taking it 16 yards to the B. C. 37.

Mattingly threw a 17-yard pass to End Dick Losh to the B.C. 19. The Hoyas made a first down on the six and again appeared stalled on the four on fourth down.

But Mattingly threw a perfect pitch to Jack O'Mahoney and the youngster held it for the clincher.

Dick Haesler, old No. 3 who beat B.C. with a field goal last year in the last two minutes, then missed the meaningless extra point. It was his first miss after 18 consecutive conversions.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Klutts

Inter-Agency Group On Transfer Rights May Be Established

An inter-agency committee may be set up to make decisions on the reemployment rights of employes who transfer to defense jobs.

The plan was suggested at a meeting of the Federal Personnel Council. Personnel directors are determined to prevent one thing—the confused state of reemployment rights of career employes following World War II. Many nonveteran employes were shuffled out of their jobs and their job rights at that time. In addition, many agencies found themselves in the impossible position of several persons claiming reemployment rights to one job.

Such a committee also would pass on contemplated transfers of employes when it becomes clear their transfers would threaten job security. Also, it could act where transfers would strip a nondefense agency of vital services.

A proposed White House order would confer reemployment rights to career people who transfer to defense jobs. The Civil Service Commission, however, would be authorized to issue rules under which the job security clause would be administered.

PEOPLE: Philip Marenberg has been appointed chairman of the first Civil Service Committee set up by the District Bar Association. An attorney here, he's a former Civil Service Commission official and the co-author of the book: "Your Civil Service" . . . Edwin Bates, administrative assistant to Senator Downey (D., Calif.) has been appointed director of Commerce's regional office in Los Angeles. He's a former newspaperman and Federal official . . . Glenn H. Staley has been appointed chief of VA's management planning staff. He succeeds Tom Kirby . . . Government Printing Office is hiring multilith operators. Status isn't necessary. Go to Room 1036 at 330 C st sw to apply for the jobs that pay from $1.30 to $1.58 an hour.

POST OFFICE has informed postmasters that they can't appoint classified substitutes to fill vacancies nor can they approve the conversion of substitutes to regular status under the Whitten rider. Postmasters may appoint temporary substitutes where replacements are necessary.

Vacancies in the postal custodial service must be filled by temporaries. Furthermore, promotions from one job to another in the custodial service, motor vehicle service, and pneumatic tube service will be filled only by temporaries. Supervisors may be promoted from one job to another on a permanent basis.

HATS OFF to W. A. McCutcheon of the Budget Bureau, who is now on loan to General Services. He's credited by Budget officials with having saved Uncle Sam 26 million dollars in the purchase of military motor vehicles.

McCutcheon is carrying on a one-man battle in Government for better motor vehicle management. He convinced the military that regular commercial vehicles would do most of the jobs around camps, posts, and stations in this country that were being done by the heavy and costly military trucks. The 26-million-dollar-saving was for the fiscal year that ended last June 30. The figure is much higher now.

Among his other accomplishments, McCutcheon has prepared replacement standards for Government vehicles; issued a preventive maintenance manual; secured adoption of a standard reporting form which enables the Government to keep tabs on the operation of its cars and trucks, and he's now trying to help GSA solve some of its vehicle problems. McCutcheon was a fleet truck operator before he joined the Federal service.

NOTES: L. W. Moore, secretary of the Tariff Commission, is retiring at his own request after 44 years of Federal service. He's an authority on budget and finance administration and personnel problems . . . CIO's Government Workers Union claims to have saved the jobs of four Bureau of Engraving & Printing Employes who were ordered fired because they refused to work overtime without notice. The Bureau later reprimanded them and kept them after the union protested.

Kentuckians Sashay in Town For Big Sesqui Blowout

The Washington Post

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

From the land of fast horses and fair women, that's the way we heard it, hundreds of Kentuckians sashayed into town yesterday to show Washington how to celebrate Washington's 150th birthday

The Sesquicentennial's Kentucky Honor Day was punctuated with a reception in the Senate caucus room, where everything Kentuckian was represented short of Man O' War high-stepping in and having a stirrup cup.

Matter of fact, the greatest horse of all time—he's from Kentucky, suh—was represented in a way by the jockey-costumed members of the Man O' War American Legion Post of Lexington's drum and bugle corps.

Vinson Heads Receiving Line

Fred Vinson, who besides being Chief Justice of the United States, is author of that famous statement "Once a Kentuckian, always a Kentuckian," headed up the receiving line. The Chief Justice was born in Louisa—Kentucky, that is.

Against a background of a giant carnation horseshoe wreath, an accordionist played "My Old Kentucky Home" more times than it takes mint juleps to put a good Kentucky man under the table. The drinks were unalcoholic punch. And a woman in a red Kentucky sunbonnet wandered through the crowd.

The reception, sponsored by the 3000-strong Kentucky Society of Washington, was only one of a host of events the Kentuckians designed to prove they stand second to none when it comes to helping cities celebrate their nativity.

Put on Recital

Earlier, the Kentuckians put on a Stephen Foster recital in the Departmental Auditorium. The Central Kentucky Homemakers Extension Chorus, representing the women of four counties, were dressed in period costumes to sing Foster's great music.

Making with the music also was the Louisville Male High School Band and Glee Club.

Carter T. Barron, executive vice chairman of the Sesquicentennial Commission, presented a scroll to Senator Virgil Chapman (D., Ky.) representing Gov. Earle C. Clements.

Following the reception, the non-stop Kentucklans piled down to Uline Arena last night for the Renfro Valley Show, a Kentucky radio show featuring the Coon Creek Girls, who sang for the King and Queen of England at the White House, and Granny Harper, 86-year-old fiddler.

Rival Union Factions Press For Thomas Fight Showdown

Rival factions of the 3000-member Local 74, AFL Building Laborers' Union, yesterday gathered forces for a showdown battle over leadership of the big union.

It appeared yesterday that the showdown in the fight—which broke wide open this week when a trial board suspended the local's president until he could refute a charge of maintaining "Communist affiliations"—would take place November 1.

The accused official, Henry Thomas, who denounced the trial and suspension as being illegal, declared yesterday he would stick to the presidency of the local, and retain the key to his office until the rank and file can vote on the issue at the November 1 meeting.

The anti-Thomas faction, headed by Secretary-Treasurer Tom Sampler, is trying to convene an emergency session of the local's executive committee with the aim of setting up Vice President Hubert Ward as "acting president," and getting this action confirmed by the November general membership meeting.

The fight is being quietly investigated by the Justice Department because Thomas, as president of the local, signed a non-Communist affidavit in the summer of 1949, as required under the Taft-Hartley Act. Thomas said then he had quit the Communist Party in order to be able to sign the oath.

Sampler, who for several years was associated with Thomas in the union's leadership, but who was elected on a separate ticket last summer, said yesterday, in a public statement, that he, too, had been a Communist but broke with the party in 1949 and that six months ago he went to the Justice Department and told "about this Communist conspiracy."

Among the charges made by Sampler was that he was recruited into the Communist Party by Thomas and that later he was pressured against trying to quit. Thomas denied the charges, and countered with his own that Sampler had "broken down the door" to get into the Communist Party and had decided to quit only after a shortage occurred in the local's treasury.

Thomas maintained yesterday that the charges and the trial were a result of "vindictiveness" by Sampler. "He figured he could get me by howling 'Red'," Thomas stated.

YMCA Inducts Hershey With 'Greetings' Card

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, last night received a familiar looking letter.

It opened with: "Greetings."

It notified him that he had been "inducted" into membership of the YMCA. With it came an honorary membership card.

General Hershey was guest speaker at the second report dinner meeting in the Central YMCA's 1950 membership campaign. Volunteer workers reported that 859 members have been signed up to date, representing more than half of the goal of 1600 members.

Falls Church School Board To Readvertise for Bids

The Falls Church School Board will readvertise for bids on its proposed new elementary school, Chairman Mrs. Mark M. Regan said yesterday.

The announcement ended, at least temporarily, speculation that the city might have to scrap its plans for the school because of rising construction costs.

Early this month, the board rejected all bids for construction of the four-classroom school because the low bid—$156,000—was $51,000 higher than the board anticipated.

The board now plans to open joint bids November 1 for both the elementary school and a proposed new $600,000, 10-classroom high school. Mrs. Regan said she hoped each contractor would bid on erection of both buildings, and thus save on construction cost.

Fairfax Aide Dies; 3 Hurt In 2 Crashes

Collision Is Fatal To Tax Official; District Couple Critically Injured

One Washington area resident was killed and three others were injured in two southern Virginia traffic accidents yesterday.

Killed in an auto-jeep collision near Richmond was James Buckley, 37, Clifton, Va., a Fairfax County deputy commissioner of revenue. His cousin, Walter Buckley, 29, Fairfax, Va., who fills a similar post, was critically injured.

In an auto-bus crash near Roanoke, Allen R. Stickley, 47, and his wife, Dunreath, of 145 Chesapeake st. sw., were critically injured. Stickley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Allen Stickley, Dayton, Va., were killed. Mrs. Wilbur H. Thomas, a sister of the elder Mrs. Stickley, was seriously hurt.

In Collision With Jeep

Walter Buckley was driving when his car collided with the jeep on U. S. Route 1, 3 miles from Richmond. He was taken to the Medical College of Virginia Hospital with a fractured skull and crushed chest.

James Buckley, riding with him, died at the same hospital soon after arrival.

Occupants of the jeep, listed as Howard Mitchell, 21, and E. J. Compton, 34, both of Richmond,

The Buckleys were en route to the convention of Virginia Commissioners of Revenue in Richmond.

James Buckley is survived by his wife Mrs. Waneta Buckley, an infant daughter, Deborah, his mother, Mrs. Lillie Buckley, and a brother, Wycliffe Buckley, all of Clifton.

Allen Stickley, a physicist at the Naval Research Laboratory here, and his wife, employed at Bolling Air Force Base, were riding with Stickley's parents when the car collided head-on with a Greyhound bus on U. S. Route 220, near Roanoke.

Stickley was taken to Lewis-Gale Hospital, Roanoke, suffering numerous fractures and shock. His wife was reported in critical condition at Jefferson Hospital.

Nine persons in the bus suffered minor injuries. The bus driver, E. D. Wilmouth of Danville, Va., said the Stickley car was trying to pass a truck as it approached him.

Bus Kills Pedestrian

In another area traffic fatality, a pedestrian tentatively identified as Stanley B. Martin, 45, of Baltimore, Md., was killed last night when he was struck by a Greyhound bus near Laurel, Md.

The bus driver, Wesley M. McClelland, 43, of 1251 11th st. nw., who was on the Baltimore-Washington run with about 15 passengers, told police he was unable to avoid the man after he "wandered" onto Baltimore blvd. at Oak Crest, Md. The accident occurred at about 8 p. m.

Witnesses told police several motorists had to swerve around the pedestrian in the southbound traffic lane to keep from striking him. State Trooper Lynwood Clark placed McClelland under a technical charge of manslaughter. He was released under $1000 bond pending a hearing November 3 in Prince Georges County Police Court at Laurel.

In Washington, James W. Ellis, 68, 6 Grant cir. nw., was taken to Garfield Hospital with a possible skull fracture after he was struck in the 3700 block of Georgia ave. nw., by a Capital Transit bus, operated, according to police, by Russell P. Ennis, 61, of 105 Holly st., Takoma Park, Md.

Strike Closes Slowe School in Protest Over Order to Start Part-Time Class Monday

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

A one-day protest strike by parents yesterday closed down the Slowe Elementary School.

Only 2 pupils of the 244 enrolled in the school at 14th and Jackson sts. ne., appeared for the morning session and they were withdrawn shortly after 10 a. m. Teachers sat around in empty classrooms for the remainder of the day.

In a letter to the Board of Education the parents said they were protesting the part-time instruction ordered for first-grade students at the school. They asked the board to reconsider its action of Wednesday in placing 40 children on the half-day program. The new schedule is to go into effect Monday.

The letter, sent by the executive committee of the Parent-Teacher Association, described the board's action as "unjust and unfair."

It declared the nearly white Noyes Elementary School has sufficient space to house the overflow of students from the Negro Slowe.

The parents also protested the present practice at Slowe of assigning students from four to five grade levels in a single room. One such room houses grades 3A, 3B, 4A, 4B and 5A.

The P-TA letter said in the Northeast there are 24 white schools with a capacity of 16,857 serving only 10,982 students. The Negro school population of 12,867 occupies 19 schools with a capacity of 11,177.

"There are three times as many vacant pupil stations in the white schools as needed to accommodate the surplus in the colored schools," the letter said.

"The association does not believe it proper expenditure of public funds to permit such a large amount of space to lie idle while so many children continue to suffer grave educational handicaps."

In voting part-time at Slowe, the school board said it was to reduce classes in the five-room school from 52 and 53 students to 40.

School officials said the children will return to full-time schooling February 1 when six rooms are completed on the second floor of the building. Funds for this construction have been available since July but work has not yet begun.

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning reported it "not feasible" to transfer one of the white schools in the neighborhood to use by the Negro children. Such a transfer would disrupt programs at Brookland, Bunker Hill and Burroughs Schools, he said.

Man Jailed 7-21 Years For Robbery

Judge Edward A. Tamm of District Court yesterday sentenced Charlie A. Berry, 40, to serve seven to 21 years in prison for burglary.

According to the charges, Berry, who gave his address as 1839 13th st. nw., broke into several apartments off Connecticut ave. nw. and took property valued at approximately $150.

The judge imposed sentence after observing that Berry had a long criminal record and was undeserving of mercy.

James Wells, 41, of 457 Massachussetts ave. nw., received a two to six year sentence in District Court for stealing $1887 from participants in a card game.

James Miller, 39, of 1427½ W st. nw., received 20 months to five years for unauthorized use of an automobile.

Tested 3 Years

Plastic Dishes May Replace GI's China

American soldiers prefer—and may soon get—plastic tableware to replace those heavy coffee mugs and all-in-one plates they've been messing with for years.

Charles N. Gardner, chemical engineer for the Army Quartermaster Corps, disclosed the Army's imminent swing to plastic in a talk yesterday to dietitians here in thirty-third annual convention of the American Dietetics Association.

After three years of field and laboratory testings, Gardner said, the Army is just about ready to adopt plastic ware as a standard item for Army mess halls.

Since plastic stands up well under Army messhall dishwashing but not so well under sterilizing heats of hospital kitchens, the heavy china plates and mugs will remain at the hospitals, he said.

Another speaker at yesterday's sessions, Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, United States Public Health Service Surgeon General, told the dietitians that Americans needn't be puffed up about their eating standards. Nutritionally speaking, at least, he said, United States does not lead the world.

Dr. Ruth M. Leverton, professor of nutrition research at the University of Nebraska, told the dietitians that the old idea that "bread is fattening" is a dangerous one for diet-conscious Americans. Some bread is needed daily, she said, to aid body stores of calcium, phosphorus and nitrogen.

D. C. Lacks 'Responsibility' In Culture, Educator Says

A prominent educator yesterday accused Washington of lacking "a sense of its own responsibilities" on the cultural level.

The tongue-lashing came from Dr. Guy Stanton Ford, former president of the University of Minnesota. Its takeoff point was a discussion of the fate of the Woodley estate at the convention of the National Council for Historic Sites and Buildings in the National Gallery of Art.

Representatives of the Citizens Emergency Committee to Save Woodley appeared at the meeting to deplore the fact that real estate interests have purchased the historic estate and summer home of four presidents and plan to build apartment buildings on it.

"It ill becomes one who has lived in Washington as few years as have I to mention this city's lack of a sense of its own responsibilities," said Dr. Ford chairman of the meeting.

"But if anyone determines our social and economic outlook in Washington it's the organized real estate interests. If you fall into their hands, Gott bewahr (God protect us)!"

The request of present owners of the estate to build the apartment buildings on it is set for hearing November 1 before the District Zoning Commission.

Woodley, a 17¾-acre estate at 3000 Cathedral ave. nw., is rich in history. According to legend, George Washington is said to have been so impressed with the beauty of Rock Creek Valley from Woodley that he suggested it as a site for the Capitol.

The present manor house was built about 1800 by the uncle of Francis Scott Key.

Mrs. Ernestine Perry, who spoke at the Council meeting on behalf of the Committee to Save Woodley, said the George Patton post of the American Legion has joined in the campaign to preserve the place. Miss Matilda Young also represented the committee at the Council meeting.

The Council, dedicated to preserving the Nation's historic sites and buildings, concluded its two-day fourth annual meeting yesterday with the panel discussion on preservation. Some 150 delegates from 20 States attended. Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d, is president of the Council.

Blind Man Saves Girl's Life in Fire

A blind man who said he dimly saw the flash of a fire "by an act of God" yesterday put out the flames searing the clothes of a screaming 4-year-old girl.

The blind man, William Mack, 46, a roomer in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Renard Mynatt, 1607 New Jersey ave. nw., said he was in the bathroom when he heard Joyce Mynatt screaming in the living room of the house.

No one else was home at the time, Mack said. He ran to the living room, saw the flash of the fire and tore off the burning clothes of the child. Mack said he then fell on her, rolling her over beneath his body. When he felt the flames were out, he took the phone off the hook and asked the operator to send the fire department.

The child was in Children's Hospital last night with second degree burns on the arms and back. The Fire Marshal's office which investigated the incident, said she may have been playing with a book of matches.

Mack told reporters he was blinded three years ago when he was attacked.

'Victim' Charged With $500 Theft He Reported

A man who gave a too-detailed account of being held up and robbed of $500 was charged with theft last night.

Joseph Pagliocchini, 19, of 118 Kentucky ave. se., reported he was robbed at gunpoint by two men whom he described to the last detail. Pagliocchini, a truck driver for the Daniel Loughran Co., tobacco wholesalers, said the men took $500 which he had collected.

Detective Sergt. James Roche and Precinct Detective Edward Daly of the robbery squad thought the story was too pat, and asked Pagliocchini to remove his heavy boots. They said they found about $500 in the boots, and put him under arrest, charged with grand larceny and making a false report.

The detectives said the man admitted his story was a hoax and that a bruise on his face was self-inflicted.

D. C. Bar Group Recommends Four For Smith Post

The Washington Bar Association yesterday recommended four attorneys for the Municipal Court vacancy caused by the death Sunday of Judge Emory B. Smith.

They are:

Maurice R. Weeks, 44, a private practitioner of 612 5th st. nw.; Richard R. Atkinson, 45, private practioner at 307 E st. nw.; Hubert B. Pair, 46, assistant Corporation Counsel, and Andrew J. Howard, 53, assistant United States Attorney.

PUC Lawyer Hints Pepco Is Asking Too Much

Will Try to Show Commission Rate Increase Request Flies Over Mark

The Potomac Electric Power Co. is asking for a higher rate boost than it needs, a District Public Utilities Commission attorney indicated yesterday.

Lloyd Harrison, PUC counsel, made the comment after finishing his cross examination of Herbert T. G. Main, Pepco rate expert.

"After our staff presents its case, I think the commission will have grounds to believe less revenue is needed than the company is asking," Harrison told Main.

The utility has asked for an over-all 9.2 percent rate increase or $3,379,000 in additional revenue.

In earlier testimony, the company witness said 1650 large apartment buildings here would get 10 percent rate reductions under the Pepco's proposed rate schedule.

The majority of these apartments, he said, are served by one master meter, and the owner, not the tenant, would receive the benefit.

Main said the new rates would place the apartment houses in a more equitable position with other residential consumers.

Harrison, followed by John Kirby, attorney for General Services Administration, in a slow-moving afternoon session sought through questioning to show that the company's proposed schedule did not allocate all increases according to the cost of service.

The prolonged hearings were recessed until 10 a. m. Monday, when Capital Transit Co. attorneys will talk on Pepco.

Pepco wants to increase the transit company's streetcar power bill by $557,000 or 59.6 percent.

FPC Experts Pare Natural Gas Increase

Federal Power Commission experts yesterday recommended wholesale gas rates which would cost the Washington Gas Light Co. half a million dollars less in 1951 than rates asked for by the local company's suppliers.

The suppliers, Atlantic Seaboard Corp. and Virginia Gas Transmission Corp., have asked the Federal Power Commission to approve a wholesale rate increase. Hearings on the request are now being held.

Atlantic Seaboard figured its proposed new tariff would cost Washington Gas Light Co. $400,000 more a year, but local company officials said company costs might be increased as much as a million dollars.

At yesterday's hearing before FPC Examiner Ewing G. Simpson, Benjamin Schiffer, FPC rate engineer, presented the commission staff's recommendations for wholesale rates which the two natural gas transmission companies may charge.

According to his exhibit, the rates recommended by the FPC would mean the Washington Gas Light Co. would pay an estimated $7,303,592 in 1951 for natural gas supplied by the wholesalers, or $543,157 less than the $7,846,749 estimated under the rates asked by the wholesalers.

Estimated 1952 figures would be $8,020,374 under the commission staff recommendations, compared to $8,897,352 under the Atlantic Seaboard-Virginia Gas Transmission requested rates, or a difference of $876,978.

Falls Church City Attorney Fight Brewing

A new Falls Church committee—set up to fight a proposal to make the city attorney's job elective—yesterday issued a statement that took the lid off the simmering city versus county fight in Falls Church.

The group, which calls itself the "Committee for Home Rule in Falls Church," favors the present system of city council appointment of the city attorney.

The issue will be decided in a city-wide referendum on election day, November 7. The referendum was provided for in the city's new charter, adopted by the last session of the Virginia General Assembly.

In its statement, the committee declared that "the power for home rule provided by the rest of the charter could be blocked by concentrating (Fairfax) county influence in the city to capture the city attorney office."

And the statement added: "By having an attorney with different political commitments than its own, the council's decisions on bond issues, school financing, zoning, and the like, could be blocked by a deadlock between the attorney and the council."

Since 1948, when Falls Church separated from Fairfax County to become an independent city, Falls Church officials have frequently accused "county-minded" residents of working against city interests.

Tension was heightened last summer when Falls Church unsuccessfully sued the county to annex some Fairfax land.

Prince Georges Grand Jury Indicts 21

Twenty-one persons indicted by the Prince Georges grand jury were arraigned yesterday in the Circuit Court at Marlboro.

The jury returned 40 indictments against the 21, including one for bigamy and two for attempted escape against two men who tried to break out of the Prince Georges County Jail in Upper Marlboro on July 7. All defendants pleaded innocent.

Indicted for bigamy was Gerald B. Wright, 40, an area circulation manager for The Washington Post. Wright was first arrested on July 17 when his wife, Mrs. Jean Wright, 210 Maple st., Morningside, charged him with bigamy after learning the identity of another wife, Mrs. Imogene Wright, 433 Brandywine st. se.

Donald M. Prendergast, 35, 500 3d st. nw., and Kermit R. Judd, jr., 25, 517 64th ave., Capitol Heights, were those indicted for attempted escape. Each was also named on four counts of storehouse breaking.

Judd and Prendergast were awaiting action by the grand jury in connection with four safe-cracking jobs when they attempted to tunnel through the walls of the jail.

D. C. Hospital Willed $70,000

Emergency Hospital is named to receive a $70,000 bequest under the will of Mrs. Laura Wilder, 80, former Washingtonian who died last month in Palm Beach, Fla.

She left an estate of approximately $750,000, according to probate papers filed yesterday in District Court by Attorney Walter M. Bastian.

Other bequests to local institutions include $10,000 to Central Union Mission, $10,000 to the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, $5000 to Children's Hospital, and $20,000 to the Washington Home for Incurables.

Mrs. Wilder put $100,000 in trust for a sister, Mary Wentworth Williams, of White Plains, N. Y. On her death the money will go to a brother, Norman Williams of Woodstock, Vt.

In addition, $35,000 goes to Mrs. Lillian Nicholson of 2312 Huidekoper pl. nw., a life-long friend.

The specific bequests under the will total $535,000. The residue of the estate, should any remain after taxes, is bequeathed to the Koussevitzky Music Foundation of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Wilder was once married to Gen. Wilbur E. Wilder and was the widow of Gen. Wesley Merritt. She lived here for 40 years, but recently summered in New England and wintered in Florida.

One On the Aisle

First Nine Hours Of 'Furies' Is Fine

By Richard L. Coe

I FULLY ENJOYED the first 9 or 10 hours of "The Furies" at the Capitol, since Barbara Stanwyck and the late Walter Huston have a great deal to gnaw on and gnaw wondrous well.

Albeit, along about milking time not even the cynical chuckling of Barbara and Huston, the sight of Judith Anderson getting scissors thrown in her eye and the cackling of Blanche Yurka as a half-breed Mexican aiming her rifle at Huston could lure me from thinking about them cows.

What I'm getting at it is that so much happens to so many in this fruity concoction from a novel by Niven Busch, that Sitter's Exhaustion eventually sits in.

"The Furies" is a New Mexican ranch, the action about 10 years later than "Two Flags West" down the street. Huston has scratched it out through the years. His wife's dead, his son's a weakling, but Daughter Barbara makes up for a lot, with that hard capacity for selfishness that has become the movie heroine's chief virtue.

T. C., as Huston's called by all, adores Barbara's hardheadedness, but he's worried about what sort of man she'll marry. The one man he won't let in the house is Wendell Corey, whose father Huston killed and who vows he'll get the "Darrow Strip," now in Huston's hands, back in the family. Naturally, this fellow strikes Barbara as just what she wants, and when she gets T. C. to put up $50,000 cash as her dowry, Corey just pockets the dough and walks off WITHOUT Barbara.

As though this weren't enough to break a girl's spirit, along comes Judith Anderson, a fancy widow from San Francisco, who makes it pretty clear that she's going to inherit the Furies, thereby so upsetting Barbara that she flings some scissors in Judith's right eye. This ultimately keeps Judith from giving Huston enough hard cash to hold onto the ranch because her marred face has given her a complex that she's no longer attractive to men.

Barbara holes up with her childhood friend, a Mexican squatter on T. C.'s property, Gilbert Roland, and finally takes to trekking about the country buying up her dad's mint.

This is a collection of legal tender that passes for money in the world that knows T. C. With it and with Corey's hateful help, she buys the Furies' cattle, thereby bankrupting pop, who, at that moment, is fortunately murdered by the patient Miss Yurka.

Huston's Last Role

If this is an inadequate resume of what goes on at the Furies, I'm afraid we'll have to leave it at that, since considerably more happens au meme temps.

Suffice it to say, every scene is a lallapolooza and Barbara bites into everything so sufficiently as to make Miss Anderson in "Medea" seem, in comparison, like Lillian Gish in "Orphans of the Storm."

Huston's deep reservoir of vitality exaggerates T. C. less than most resourceful actors could. It is a telling, shrewd characterization, despite the fact that the role itself is unworthy for the great performer's goodby to his work. He worked well with Barbara and their scenes together have a crackle you rarely find.

The large supporting cast, founded on sure-fire names, is corking good, but so endlessly tortuous are the byways of the yarn that "The Furies" is too much even for such an aggregation.

SIBYL BOWAN'S tried and true impressions are the highlight of the Capitol's stage revue; her Scandinavian prima donna, her Legs Dietrich and her unbeatable Mrs. Roosevelt are sock laughs, and she's added a neat one of Mary Martin . . . Rory Calhoun, the dark and handsome screen heavy, and his wife, Lita Baron, have an act wherein Miss Baron's song stints with Xavier Cugat stand her in good stead; Rory sings and proves an amiable personality, though he suffers from the usual Hollywood-stage visitor complaint of having little to offer except his big, beautiful self . . . Eddy Manson's harmonica excerpts are notable for their unfamiliarity and the dancing Robinsons, Bud and Cece, open the bill.

MYSTERY UNMASKED: Opening night of "Androcles and the Lion," which is being played, Sundays and Mondays excepted, by the Mount Vernon Players, revealed identity of the Lion . . . That vital half of the title is being acted by the Players' director, Donald Pimm, whose assignment was kept a public secret till opening night . . . Robert Huey is the Androcles, Davida Young, Bert Bram and Dave Watterworth heading the support . . . Seat reservations at DIstrict 1484.

MYSTERY MASKED: There's been talk that Roland Petit's "Les Ballets de Paris" will be coming to town, but where? . . . Now completing a New York run under the three-headed management of the Messrs. Shubert, S. Hurok and Arthur Lesser, this has a Washington date, a former cast member informs me . . . For a while the National had made no announcement for a week from Sunday, but now it seems "Fancy Pants" will be coming in; since the dancers aren't Equity members, they could be booked into E st., but it's unlikely . . . The Gayety's pretty well booked and these saucy little dances would be lost in Consty Hawl . . . And Dr. Marvin's turned down a lot of Lisner applicants . . . So, where for naughty "Carmen"?

THIS MORNING the Plaza will be showing "The Little Ballerina," with Margot Fonteyn, a children's film about the ballet; 9:30 and 11 are the times for the two performances sponsored by the Children's Theater and Sam Roth, Plaza prexy . . . "Faust and the Devil" will be holding for a third Plaza week, going on right after "Ballerina."

BRIEFS: "The Curious Savage" is in its final two Gayety performances before opening Tuesday at Gotham's Martin Beck . . . "Boy Meets Girl," as directed by John Coppinger, will be acted tonight and tomorrow night at the Olney Theater by the drama group of the Montgomery County Jewish Community . . . A reading of "Over 21" will be given tonight at 8 for the benefit of the new parish house building fund of the Falls Church Episcopal parish

THE ALEXANDRIA Optimist Club drive for funds for its boys' club work will benefit from the "Grand Opening" of the Alexandria Barn Dance tonight at 9 in the Cameron st. recreation center . . . Johnny, Jack and their Tennessee Mountain Boys, Emory Martin, Kitty Wells, Ray Atkins, Cousin Nimrod, Paul Warren and Dick Thomas are on the benefit bill.

"THE FURIES," a Paramount release produced by Hal Wallis, directed by Anthony Mann, screenplay by Charles Schnee from a novel by Niven Busch. At the Capitol.

'No Educational Iron Curtain'

D. C. Barnard Club Hears Talk by Dean McIntosh

"We must not have an iron curtain around education," Dean Millicent Carey McIntosh of Barnard College said last night.

Addressing members of the Washington Barnard Club at the American Newspaper Women's Club, she said, "We must give students a realistic idea of the world in which they are to live."

Dean McIntosh advises that it is not wise to teach only the faults of our country and to give a pessimistic view of society. But, she emphasized, she believes it equally wrong to ignore obvious problems and present only a glossy picture of the Nation.

Through discussion, field work, and independent effort, students can achieve a wise balance, says the Barnard dean.

"IN STUDYING foreign affairs, I think an accurate analysis of communism should be given to students so that they will not be misled afterwards by propaganda," she continued.

Along with realism, she said, should come a humility which makes it possible to learn from experience, to face and accept new facts. Education, she continued, must concern itself with developing inner resources.

It should also provide opportunities for students to clarify their purpose and to develop idealism which will give them the ability to advance the frontiers of democracy and build a new world in whatever circumstances they may meet, she added.

Dean McIntosh, who arrived from New York just before the meeting, is the wife of Dr. Rustin McIntosh of New York City, and the mother of five children. She is an authority on education for marriage, career and public life.

Salvation Army, Fashion Show, Prize Twosome

By Evelyn Hayes

EVERYBODY WANTS to help the Salvation Army, and everybody likes to see a good fashion show. When the two get together, there's a sell-out.

That's what it was yesterday afternoon in the Shoreham Main Ballroom for Julius Garfinckel's Grand Couturier Fashion Show, sponsored by the Salvation Army Auxiliary.

Proceeds of the benefit will go for recreational equipment, lounging chairs and other home-like touches needed at the Emergency Home for Women and children.

THE SHOW was a dramatic parade of good-looking clothes for day and glamorous clothes for evening—each costume designed by a Big Name in the Couture, French and American. Three of the highlights are pictured here.

One of the hits of the show, pictured at the right, was the chemise dress—the new uncluttered unrelieved line of Traina Norell's collection in dark red wool. It can be worn belted, too, giving an entirely new line and the effect of a different dress.

And there were many others, such as Jacques Fath's brown taffeta after-five suit with black velvet collar and black chiffon "modesty piece." Ceil Chapman's short evening dress of flame color nylon tulle was another star. A study in contrast, it poses a very beruffled skirt on a stark sheer top with tight long sleeves—all over matching flame color taffeta strapless slip.

Jobe' Says..

Fringe is part of the Spanish in us this fall. Rows and rows of narrow, middling width or wide fringe. Fringe is growing very popular as a sheath skirt or as a trimming. We all know that fringe is very kind to figures, too. Black is my first choice, but navy blue or gray fringe is pretty, too. And if you go gay—what is prettier than a red-fringed dress?

So the fringed dress is with us again for afternoon or after dark. No, it's not old for our young matrons—most of you younger gals have never owned one have you? Personally I've never been without one. I think it's a classic must in my wardrobe.

Clubwomen Offer Defense Aid

By Norma Lanum

This country's largest organized bloc of untapped labor—the Nation's clubwomen—offered its services yesterday to the Government for civil defense work.

In an emergency resolution the Board of Directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs pledged to serve "anywhere, anytime" for "such activities as may be required."

The action was taken in the second day of a three-day board meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

A spokesman for the National Security and Resources Board, the Federal Government's principal civil defense agency, immediately expressed appreciation for the offer.

"THE NSRB is extremely gratified by the resolution of the General Federation of Women's Clubs," said Mrs. Martha Sharp, special assistant to NSRB chairman Stuart Symington.

"We appreciate the importance of the role of club women in future civil defense plans," she continued, "and we are preparing possible assignments for them."

The exact nature of "possible assignments" for the club women within the civil defense program were discussed yesterday by Mrs. Sharp and Mrs. George W. Jaqua of Winchester, In., chairman of the safety department of the General Federation.

Mrs. Jaqua suggested the some 17,000 member clubs of the federation conduct or help conduct a future Nation-wide fingerprinting program to be used for identifying possible disaster victims. Or the club women might carry out a blood-type tatoo program, said Mrs. Jaqua, if the NSRB desires. She also offered the services of the federation for education or public relations programs.

MRS. SHARP suggested the federation launch its defense programs with compulsory classes in first aid.

Mrs. Hiram Houghton of Red Oak, Iowa, president of the federation, asked the directors to make civil defense the major program of the club season for the State federations and local clubs.

"If your cities, counties and States are not already working on defense programs, get them started yourselves," she urged.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE of the Federation of Women's Clubs has taken another step toward concrete action for civil defense by supporting the Federation's membership in the newly organized "Women's Clearing House for National Defense." The "clearing house,' which will have its first meeting in New York City Monday at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, has a tentative membership of 14 leading national women's organizations.

The committee, formed October 6 at a meeting in Washington of more than 30 national women's groups, is charged with advising the government on women's resources for civil defense and economic mobilization.

Mrs. Houghton, temporary chairman of the "clearing house," and Mrs. Ambrose Diehl of San Francisco, Calif., chairman of the Federation's new department for defense and economic security, will attend the meeting.

Mrs. Diehl plans to present her newly-completed survey of available untapped womanpower in the Nation.

First step in a Nation-wide civil defense plan, Mrs. Diehl maintains, is to locate these "unoccupied" women and determine which are most qualified to serve as neighborhood leaders within the program.

AT YESTERDAY'S meeting, the Federation's board of directors also reaffirmed their opposition to un-American activities.

They demanded that current laws of sedition or treason be used to punish persons committing overt acts or making statements "threatening the overthrow of our form of government."

The club women also reaffimed their confidence in the United Nations, and "faith in its ability as an instrument for collective security against aggression."

At the close of afternoon business sessions the club directors had tea at the Blair House with Mrs. Truman.

Women's Clubs Plan Broadcasts

The General Federation of Women's Clubs is in the radio business for the first time in its history.

Beginning the first of the year, the clubwomen will join the Mutual Broadcasting System in producing "Opinion-Aire," a weekly, half-hour, forum-type program.

There will be 25 minutes of forum discussion of topics of national interest, and then a five-minute "capsule" program of Federation news tentatively named "Clubwomen on the Air."

All the program lacks at this stage of the planning is an allotted day, time and sponsor.

Now Edna Rates a Second Glance

By Ann Lawrence

Two weeks ago, Edna was a girl who, in her own words, never rated a second glance.

You can judge for yourself by the photograph on this page.

Today, well . . . Edna's own words tell the story best: "As I walked down the street, on my way home, with my shoulders squared back, my chin and head held high . . . you see I was remembering the posture lessons . . . two men standing on the corner and looking the picture of sartorial elegance had that certain interested gleam. And from the corner of my eye, I could see them turn again to look as I walked by!"

Edna is the same girl she was two weeks ago. She is still a redhead, with thick, coarse hair. But it has been softened with the correct shampoo methods, geometrically cut to fit her head in a smooth, sleep cap.

The shape of her face, long and narrow, has not been altered, really. But her hair-do, two tones of well-blended powder base, plus reshaped eyebrows help to give the illusion of an oval face.

ONE OF EDNA'S most important lessons was learning to build a background for her lovely red hair. Simply cut clothes, dependent upon exquisite styling and line for ornamentation, serve to dramatize her auburn locks. Colors, complementary to both her hair and her skin . . . beige, bronze, tangerine, dark greens and deep browns . . . have replaced the bright greens and royal blue which vied too violently with her coloring.

She is one more young woman who has learned, through self-analysis, to make the most of nature's endowments.

And, as she said . . . They did turn around for a second glance.

Today's Events . . .

THE KEYSTONE CHAPTER, DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION will hear Mrs. Myrtle Cheney Murdock at a meeting today in the home of Mrs. George W. Crawford, 2800 Woodley rd. . . . Maids of Athens, Muses Chapter No. 22, is holding its eleventh annual Halloween dance in the Wardman Park Hotel tonight from 9:30 until 1 a. m.

So Many Friends

I have so many faithful friends . . . Wherever I may go . . . It seems that everyone on earth . . . Is somebody I know . . . Dear Berta, Joe and Anna Mae . . . And Jan and Ginger too . . . Young Mary, Trudy, Gayle and Clare . . . To name a very few . . . And, oh, there are so many more . . . By telephone and mail . . . That I could never feel alone . . . And I could never fail . . . Because they all encourage me . . . To do my very best . . . And just in knowing them I am . . . Their everlasting guest . . . I have so many friends today . . . I can not count them all . . . For they are legion as the stars . . . That shape a silver shawl.

Yugoslav Visitor Honored

By Elizabeth Maguire

THE FIRST reception in many moons at the Yugoslav Embassy was held yesterday honoring the Vice President of Yugoslavia and Mme. Karjelj. For many, it was a first introduction to the Ambassador of Yugoslavia and Mme. Popovic, who arrived in this country last June.

The youthful hostess and the Ambassador received, with their guests of honor, in the library at the head of the staircase. Rooms of the Yugoslav Embassy are admirably suited for parties where guests arrive by the hundreds, and yesterday every inch of the spacious rooms was put to good use.

AMONG THE GUESTS were the Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani, Ambassador Wrong of Canada, the Danish Ambassador, Henrik de Kauffmann, the Swiss Ambassador and Madame Bruggman, the Luxembourg Ambassador, Hugues Le Gallais, the Finnish Ambassador, Dr. Jutila, and the Ambassador of the Philippines, Joaquin M. Elizalde.

Mme. Dragica Martinis, prima donna of the Zagreb Opera, sang a few songs in Croatian, her native tongue. A large buffet table in the dining room offered a delectable array of Slavic hors d'oeuvres.

The Yugoslav vice president is also foreign minister of his country. He will be in Washington over the weekend and leaves Monday for New York en route home.

CHAO PHYA SRIDHARMADHIBES, president of the Thai Senate, and Senator Phot Sarasin, visitors from Banghok, who are here to study ways and methods of government, were honored yesterday at a reception given by the Thai Ambasador and Princess Wan Waithayakon. The reception, held at the embassy from 6 to 8, was attended by top officials of the land.

Deputy Minister of Finance of Thailand, Sawet Piamphongsan and the Governor of the Thai Bank, M. L. Snidwongse, were among the guests.

Many more included Mme. Jooste, wife of the South African Ambassador, the Minister of Syria and Mme. El-Khouri, and John Farr Simmons, chief of protocol of the State Department. Also Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Landon (she is the author of "Anna and the King of Siam"), the Italian Ambassador and his signora, and the Irish Ambassador and Mrs. Hearne, and the Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne.

CHAMPAGNE AND ORCHIDS:

THE ANNUAL CHAMPAGNE and orchids party in the Mayflower lounge was attended last evening by a galaxy of Capitalites and diplomats. Unlike champagne and orchid parties of other years, last night's festivity was a dinner dance starting at 8 o'clock. There was an orchid corsage for each lady, and a glass of champagne for everybody.

Glimpsed in the gathering were the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Erkin, the Peruvian Ambassador and Senora de Berckemeyer, the Greek Ambassador, Athanase G. Politis, the Spanish Ambassador at large and Senora de Lefuerica, the Brazilian Minister and Senhora de Mello-Franco, and the Greek Minister and Mme. Economou Gouras.

Among those entertaining at parties were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., Mrs. Fred Britten, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Akers, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Joseph F. Battley, Col. and Mrs. Andrew E. Van Esso and Mr. and Mrs. Durries Crane.

Mr. and Mrs. Dale Miller has as guests Representative and Mrs. Tom Pickett, Mrs. Russell Long, wife of the Senator from Louisiana, whose husband is out of town, and David Bolton.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Ching were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Corneal J. Mack. A surprise attraction was Lisa Kirke, star of "Kiss Me Kate," who came down from New York for the occasion. Bob Grant and his orchestra alternated with Sidney's orchestra for dancing.

MEMBERS of the Candlelight Waltz Group held their first dance of the season last evening at the Washington Club. Miss Mary N. S. Whiteley, Miss Lucy Hoffman, Jack Grindle, Bowdoin Craighill, and Comdr. Robert Lunny, all members of the group, gave a joint cocktail party beforehand at the home of Miss Hoffman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Nash.

Guests cocktailing and waltzing later included Miss Virginia Summerlin, Miss Clara Fahnestock, Peter Gilsey, John Kauffman, Mr. and Mrs. Russell True, Miss Julie Foraker, Miss Juliette Gill, Miss Dixie Scott, and Mr. and Mrs. T. Perry Lippitt.

ANOTHER first dance of the season was the Friday Cotillion held last night at the Sulgrave Club. Sponsors of the Cotillion series are Miss Delphine Colquitt, Miss Cynthia Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Jacobsen, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Wozencraft, and Mr. and Mrs. James McSherry Wimsatt.

Many dinner parties preceded the dance, including one given by Mr. and Mrs. Jacobsen, who entertained for Miss Agnes Birney, Franklin Salisbury, Miss Mary McLaughlin, Charles Schneider, and Mr. and Mrs. John A. Day.

THE ENGINEER COMMISSIONER of Washington, Brig. Gen. Gordon Russell Young, and Mrs. Young, were at home yesterday from 5:30 to 8 o'clock. It was the second of two parties which the general and his wife have given this fall for their friends in official and residential circles.

Ladies who took a turn at pouring tea were Mrs. Jacob Devers, Mrs. Tom Clark, Senora de Berckemeyer, Mrs. Conger Pratt, Mrs. William Dawson, Senora de Nieto del Rio, Senora de la Colina, Mme. Erkin, Miss Katherine Andrews and Miss Marion Townsley.

DELEGATES to the International Colloquium on Luso-Brazilian studies were guests last evening of the Assistant Secretary of State, Edward W. Barrett, at a dinner held in the Hispanic Room of the Library of Congress. The day before the dinner Mr. Barrett was called out of town, and his deputy, Howland H. Sargeant acted as host.

Following the dinner, delegates heard a concert, played by the Berkshire quartet.

MISS MARIAN HENNEBERRY was the guest of honor at a farewell luncheon given for her October 19 at Water Gate Inn by her office associates of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Mrs. Raymond Tartiere of Middleburg and Georgetown gave a small cocktail party Wednesday for her mother, Mrs. Rosenthal of Chicago, who is here for a visit.

ALONG EMBASSY ROW:

TOP RANKING officials attended a dinner held last evening at the Egyptian Embassy in honor of the Foreign Minister of Egypt, Mohamed Salah El-Din Bey, and Mme. Salah El-Din Bey. The distinguished visitors were entertained by the Ambassador and Mme. Abdul Rahim, whose house guests they have been for the past week. Tomorrow the Minister and his wife are leaving for New York, where they will visit for two weeks before returning to Egypt.

THE PRESS ATTACHE at the Turkish Embassy and Mme. Baba gave a buffet supper party Thursday evening at their home, in honor of the Military Attache at the embassy and Mme. Tulga, who are returning soon to Turkey.

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Erkin were ranking guests at the party. Admiral and Mrs. J. W. G. Settle, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Huntington Damon, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Seager and embassy staff members and their wives were also guests.

Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador; Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, the Ambassador of Australia and Mrs. Makin, former Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja. Mt. Holyoke Alumnae Warned Of Future Defense Sacrifices

MILITARY SUCCESS in Korea must not lull the United States into a false sense of security, Dr. John Steelman said yesterday, because "this is what the Communists desire."

The presidential assistant was the guest speaker at the Mount Holyoke Regional Alumnae Conference dinner and reception last night at the Shoreham Hotel.

This Nation, he said, must recognize the many-sided responsibilities which lie ahead. "We must complete our military task in Korea, help to rebuild and unite that war-ravaged peninsula; intensify our efforts to encourage in the freedom-loving nations the economic and military strength and the will to resist communism."

"Also," Dr. Steelman added, "we must greatly increase our own military strength."

EVEN THOUGH the United States has doubled the defense appropriation this year, Dr. Steelman said, "we realize that even this amount will be insufficient for the military strength we must have. We must be prepared for increased military expenditures for years to come."

Supporting a defense program of adequate size will affect every aspect of the Nation's economic life, said Dr. Steelman. It will mean expanding industrial production, increasing plant capacity and employing millions of new workers.

He warned that such a program will entail sacrifices—higher taxes, rigid credit controls and other regulations which beset the citizens of a nation necessarily geared to the exacting economy of immediate and long-range defense.

He punctuated this with the reminder that "Korea is only another incident in the strategy of Communist imperialism."

PRECEDING the dinner and speech, the alumnae attended a reception at which Dr. Steelman was one of the honored guests.

The conference will continue this morning with a symposium on "The Continuing Challenge of Evaluation" and an alumnae meeting and tea at the Guatemalan Embassy during the afternoon.

Capital Store Sales Up 10% During Week

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales in the week ended October 14 were 10 percent over the same 1949 week, the Federal Rserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

Substantial buying last Saturday, the final day before more stringent credit controls took effect, pushed up total figures. Merchants were hesitant to credit imminence of the curbs for the increase but admitted that "hard goods," most affected by the new regulations, moved "very briskly" on the last day of the week.

For the four weeks ended October 14, cumulative store sales here were reported 6 percent above the like period last year.

Meanwhile, Dun & Bradstreet said yesterday that tighter credit controls cut down retail trade this week.

"Unfavorable weather and the tightening of credit controls were instrumental in reducing total retail trade slightly below the level of the preceding week," the survey pointed out.

"Aggregate dollar volume of consumer purchases continued to exceed that of a year ago. Shoppers were generally not as selective and price-conscious as in 1949 . . . Indian summer weather in many sections discouraged interest in coats and suits."

LIFE INSURANCE: September sales of ordinary life insurance in Washington totaled $10,571,000, an increase of 22 percent over the like 1949 month: Cumulative sales for the first nine months this year amounted to $103,172,000, a gain of 12 percent over the corresponding period last year. Despite the substantial gain, local sales lagged as compared with a 33 percent upsurge nationally during the month and an 18 percent gain for the nine-month period. For September, Virginia showed a 54 percent jump and Maryland a 33 percent leap.

Previous sections have sold out before the homes were completed. Quality of construction is probably the chief reason for the quick acceptance and admiration of these houses by home seekers. The excellent construction and attention to details apparent in these sound houses indicate the care put in their erection.

Location is really outstanding. Still within the District, the homes are far enough removed from the congested areas to capture that relaxed and refreshing air usually only associated with more distant areas. Yet all conveniences are close by, including excellent bus service.

Youth Proves Age to Become U. S. Citizen

A Chinese youth had to prove he was 22 years old yesterday before he could be declared an American citizen in District Court.

The father, Chin Toy, of Chicago, is a native American who returned to China in 1927 to marry. He left a few months later and was informed that on September 14, 1928, his wife, Wong Yip Jun, had borne him twin sons.

Chin Toy testified that he never returned to China but wrote his wife and sent her money and jewelry. In 1947, she came to America with Chin Sick Wing, one of the twins.

Immigration officials, upon viewing the slightly built youth, refused to officially admit him. They said that from their impression he could not be out of his teens.

Through Attorney Lambert O'Donnell, the boy sought to have a judicial declaration that he was an American citizen as the blood son of an American.

During the court trial, Judge David A. Pine said that he believed the youth to be younger than his stated years, but appointed two physicians to make an examination. They reported that from bone structure and body development he appeared to be between 19 and 25 years of age.

He said that in view of the expert evidence, he would hold that the young man was Chin Toy's son and granted the citizenship decree.

Methodist Pastors to Get Minimum Pay of $1800-$2400

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—Minimum salary scale for Methodist ministers, ranging from $2400 down to $1800 yearly, was adopted today by delegates to the Virginia Methodist Conference.

Delegates also adopted a proposal for a special fund to supplement the salaries of ministers whose charges are unable to meet the minimums.

Money from the fund will be available only to charges which are able to pay at least 80 percent of the minimum salary of their minister.

Minimums set for ministers in full connection with the conference were $2100 for single ministers and $2400 for married ministers. For supply pastors—those who are not ordained or who do not fully meet education requirements—the minimums are $2100 and $1800, respectively, for married and single ministers.

The Rev. H. S. Southgate, of Arlington, told the conference tonight that benevolent giving for world service during the past year was up by approximately one-third and totaled $460,000.

Wife Asks Court For Maintenance From Dr. Moulton

Mrs. Alicia Pratt Moulton, 48, of Ventnor, N. J., yesterday filed a countersuit in District Court for maintenance from her husband, Dr. Forrest R. Moulton, astronomer, of 3027 N st. nw.

Her claim was in answer to his action filed here in June on grounds of voluntary separation. In addition to maintenance, Mrs. Moulton asked through Lewis H. Shapiro, her attorney, that her husband be enjoined from secreting or disposing of his assets pending the court's decree.

Moulton, 78, teacher and author, is well known for his contributions to astronomy and related sciences.

A Delicate Problem In High Witchery

By John Crosby

IF MY MEMORY is at all trustworthy, the brassiere industry is a comparatively recent American phenomenon.

The things existed certainly for centuries, but the huge industry that now assaults us with its advertising on subways, buses, magazines and newspapers is fairly recent. I have always been struck forcibly by brassiere advertising simply because I never realized the nature of the engineering problem was so extraordinary difficult. The problems of stress—if you believe the advertising, and I believe all advertising implicitly—are comparable to those of the geniuses who strung up the George Washington Bridge. Matter of calculus, solid geometry and physics.

Crosby

Anyhow, the brassiere people have now taken to television, where they have encountered an even more formidable problem—how to advertise the product without getting all the Parent-Teacher Associations down on their ears. One typical program is "The Robbins Nest" (ABC-TV 10 p. m. Fridays) sponsored by the Exquisite Form Brassiere Co., creators of the HI/low Witchery & Disguise Bra. In promoting this miracle of engineering resourcefulness, there was a good deal of witchery but practically no disguise.

THE HI/low Witchery & Disguise Bra was displayed on a model. She is—what's the phrase for it—the straight man for the advertising pitch. That is, she just stands there and smiles and smiles and smiles while from somewhere out of sight a voice purrs on about its youthful uplift and exquisite form, and especially about how it couldn't fail to mould me into charm and grace. I don't know about that. A lot of people have tried to mould me into charm and grace. My mother, my wife, to name only two. No one has got very far. I doubt that the HI/low Witchery & Disguise people can manage it either. Some things defy even witchcraft.

Somebody, who realized that this form of witchery is a rather delicate thing to sell on television, has carefully instructed the model who displays the HI/low, etc., to stand very, very quietly during the commercial pitch. She does, too, but this just accentuates the—uh—positive, if I make myself clear and I'm afraid I do. Her lips twitch from time to time. Her eyes roam the ceiling; then, when they've exhausted that area, she glances roguishly at the camera which is to say, you. Meanwhile, the sales pitch goes on and on. I don't know how the girls behave on the block of an Arabian slave mart, but it must be something like this.

THERE'S NOT much else to tell you about "The Robbins Nest." It's described here in a press release as "intimate variety" and, believe me, that's a splendid description. A dark-haired, supercharged young man named Fred Robbins introduces singers and instrumentalists, chats with them and then turns them loose to do their acts. The emphasis is on jazz and pretty good jazz; it's all over in 15 minutes and it is a rather pleasant, unassuming little program, apart from the HI/low Witchery & Disguise. Unassuming is not quite the word for that stretch of the program.

Boys Will Be Buoyant, And Silence Is Seldom

Guy B. Epling of 5759 13th st. nw. recently visited a friend who has two small sons, and came away with the comment:

Poets oft write of
The wonders of boys.
But none I recall cite
The absence of noise.

Mary Ellen observes that whether you call a boy a healthy, active lad—or a mischievous little imp — depends mostly on whose boy you're talking about.

"ON CALL," "OFF DUTY"

The cab had stopped for the traffic lights at 11th and E sts. nw. and I reached for the door handle.

"Sorry, bud," said the driver, pulling down his sun visor to display an "Off Duty" sign, "I'm not in service."

I retired to the curb to hunt another cab. The taxi I had just tried to engage wheeled through the intersection, made a U-turn on 11th st., and swooped down on a party of four standing in front of the Chicken Hut. He had been "Off Duty" just long enough to pass up a "single" when he had already spotted a group of four.

It didn't occur to me until later that I had reason to be doubly indignant. The incident happened at about 6 p. m. and, to check my memory of the law, I called Pvt. George Clarke in the Hack Inspector's office.

"That's right," Pvt. Clarke confirmed, "a cab is not supposed to be moving about the streets during rush hours if its driver is off duty. The regulations say that, during non-rush hours, if a hacker wishes to take his vehicle out of service and go to a place of his own choosing, he may display an 'Off Duty' sign and decline to accept passengers. But he is not permitted to drive around with an 'Off Duty' sign between 7 and 9 in the morning, or between 4 and 7 in the afternoon."

Fares may also be declined by hackers who display "On Call" signs — even during rush hours. But chiselers run a grave risk of getting into serious trouble. When a hacker is stopped by a policeman and asked for proof that he's "On Call," the burden of proof is on the driver.

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

"Samuel Finley Breese Morse, inventor of the telegraph, particularly asked that he be referred to by his full name," writes Arthur G. Cole of 9901 Lorain ave., Silver Spring, Md.

"Historians respected his wishes, but not those who erected a tablet in his honor on 7th st., between F and G. They have not only used initials—they didn't even get them right. On the tablet, he's 'S. E. B. Morse'."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four beautiful female kittens, 3 months old." (Victor 1745.)

"Housebroken, affectionate 8-month-old black male cat." (Sligo 4634.)

"Affectionate all-black male kitten with white paws." (Shepherd 6900.)

"Will deliver housebroken 3-month-old kitten, black with white stockings and necktie." (Emerson 3295.)

STREET SCENE

Our reporter for this one is Kathryn W. Hughes of 223 Holly ave., Takoma Park, Md.:

He was a little fellow, obviously fresh from some small town and newly inducted into the Army. His eyes drank in the grandeur of the Government buildings, much as any tourist's might on his first visit to Washington.

At the corner, he sauntered out into the street, still taking in the sights, and not paying much attention to where he was going.

Suddenly a cop's whistle shrilled, and the frightened rookie snapped to in bewilderment, for the first time noticing the policeman—and the red light he had violated.

We couldn't hear what was being said, but the policeman's jaw moved at a furious pace until he spied a military police vehicle passing by. Beckoning to the driver, he turned his "prisoner" over to the MP's, and went back to directing traffic.

PERSONAL NOTES

Merritt G. Bradford, 541 21st st. nw.: A fine poem, but too long for the limited amount of space available here.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Mrs. Frank J. Woodsmall of 3937 1st st. sw. forwards this quote from the bulletin board in a neighborhood drug store:

"Young couple desire business girl for furnished room in new house next to bath."

I understand that in some of the newer houses the bath is right inside.

"ANY" DOESN'T SCAN

This norious habit I should break;
It's like a self-made fetter.
Tobacco's chewed by man and worms,
But worms don't know no better.

Infantrymen Are Unsung Heroes

By Drew Pearson

Under the current Army pay system, the real heroes in the Korean war are drawing the least pay. They don't even get a fair share of the glory when the publicity and medals are dished out.

Pearson

These unsung heroes are the infantrymen, who form the Army's battering ram, but who are not paid as much as the technical men and pencil pushers behind the lines.

It used to be that infantrymen could collect $10 extra each month for combat work. If they wore the combat infantryman's badge, It was good for a $10 monthly bonus. However, even this has been taken away from them in Korea, despite the fact that combat airmen and submarine men still draw $20 to $75 per month for "hazardous duty."

Meanwhile, it's the infantrymen who feel the bite of enemy bullets, who slog through mud, sleep in foxholes and live on cold rations, who have little chance to take a bath, see a movie, attend church, write letters, or sleep with their shoes off.

Nevertheless, in Korea, the average monthly pay of a man in an infantry rifle company is $135, compared with $226 for an Air Force combat crew man and $172 for a submariner.

Highest-paid troops in the Army are Ordnance men, followed by Signal Corps, Armored Force, Quartermaster, Antiaircraft, Field Artillery, Engineers, Medical and, last on the list, the Infantry.

It's the same story with other awards. During World War II, infantrymen suffered 70 percent of the casualties but got only 11.6 percent of the medals. The Air Force was decorated with 76.2 percent of the medals, while other branches got the remaining 12.2 percent.

Now that the Korean war is nearly won, the Army should give fair pay and recognition to the foot soldiers who did the slugging and the slogging.

Mrs. Veep 'Grounded'

Vice President Alben Barkley and his charming bride see eye to eye on about everything except riding in airplanes.

Barkley takes to the air like a duck to water, can snooze peacefully even during a choppy flight. However, Mrs. Barkley is addicted to airsickness and flatly refuses to fly.

The Veep wanted his lady to accompany him when he took off on his current Democratic barnstorming tour. But it was "no go" when he reported that he was flying. Instead, Mrs. B. entrained for the family hearth in Paducah, Ky.

"I have no desire to become an angel—not yet, anyway," she told a friend.

Farm Mineral Rights

Many farmers still don't know it, but the Government has sold the mineral rights out from under some of their farmlands without so much as notifying the owners. The Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation has given outside speculators the right to drill for oil or dig for uranium on hundreds of farms.

This has already started a one-man investigation by Delaware's GOP Senator John Williams, causing the Government to reverse its policy and now give the farmer first crack at mineral rights on his own property.

However, many farmers, whose rights have already been sold, do not realize that they have only 50 percent claim to the oil and uranium that may be lying under their fields. What's more, they probably won't find out until the speculators show up on the farms to drill.

These farms were the ones that went bankrupt during the depression. In most cases, the Government took over the mortgages and later resold the farms. However, it was usually written into the small print that the Government retained 50 percent of the mineral rights.

Later, when traces of oil were discovered near these farms, the Government began selling the mineral rights behind the farmers' backs.

For example, Elmer P. Johnson bought a 160-acre depression farm from the Government in Oceana County, Mich., in 1938. The Government reserved half the mineral rights, then sold half of its rights 10 years later to Augie Busk of Grand Rapids, Mich., for $800. Exactly seven days after the sale, the Roosevelt Oil Co. struck oil on Johnson's farm. Overnight, the value of Busk's new mineral rights shot up from $800 to $8000.

Another Oceana County farmer, Paul Weiner, reported his trouble over mineral rights to Senator Williams.

"I was not notified of the lease nor of the sale of these mineral rights, nor did I even know that the Government had retained one-half of the mineral rights until February 24, 1949, when someone tried to secure a lease from me for the other one-half to drill for oil," Weiner wrote.

Even more shocking, a group of Government insiders formed an investment pool in St. Louis and bought up mineral rights from their own agency.

They were W. H. Droste, W. R. Frankhanel, H. W. Snodgrass, J. L. Barrett and D. M. Hardy—all high officials in the St. Louis Federal Land Bank. As such, they were in a position to get inside information.

While these men were hired to help the farmers, they bought the farmers' mineral rights for their own profit instead.

Continental Building Sold For $4,500,000

The Continental Building at 1311 K st. nw. has been purchased by W. R. Kelley, head of the mortgage lending firm which bears his name, for about $4,500,000, it was announced yesterday.

Formerly known as the Investment Building, the 11-story structure was sold by the Southland Life Insurance Co. of Texas. Its assessed valuation is $2,637,185.

Kelley said the transaction was "all-cash, with no strings involved." The building was purchased solely as an investment, he said, and not for speculative purposes. Its yearly income from rents comes to about $540,000.

Built in 1929 by the F. H. Smith Co., the structure is one of the largest private office buildings in the District. It was originally divided into 481 offices, according to Kelley, but many have since been subdivided. There are some 25 stores on the ground floor, he said.

The buyer announced that he plans no changes in rent scales except in a few instances. These, he indicated, would apply to some of the ground-level stores which are paying smaller rents than the offices. Such rents will be "equalized," he said.

Kelley said he had known for several months that the property was for sale, but that he became interested in it himself just recently. The insurance company had refused to sell the building if any "conditions" went with the contract, he reported. His was the first "all-cash, no strings attached" offer, he said.

A 90-day settlement is provided for in the contract, according to Kelley. He said he will settle, however, whenever title papers are completed, which may be within two weeks.

Offices of the Kelley company, which has been operating here for more than 25 years, are in the building. The structure has a waiting list for office space containing 100-odd names, it was reported.

Psychiatrists Will Convene Here Tonight

Washington psychiatrists will meet in scientific session here at 8.30 p. m. today at the D. C. Medical Society Building, 1718 M st. nw.

Guest speaker for the occasion is Dr. Curt Richter, of Johns Hopkins University Hospital, who will report on "Domestication of the Norway Rat, and Its Medical and Psychiatric Implications."

The program, under auspices of the Washington Psychiatric Society, will be of particular interest to psychiatrists in view of recent work on cortisone and ACTH and their relationship to personality changes, according to Dr. Henry P. McLaughlin, society secretary.

Dr. Richter's paper will be discussed by Drs. David McK. Rioch and Roy Hertz.
